Monroeville, Indiana 46773

Engrossed in construction taking place on the junior high addition, junior Karen Bradtmueller watches from the drafting room window as workmen use the crane to put heavy steel girders in place.

Sounds, smells head

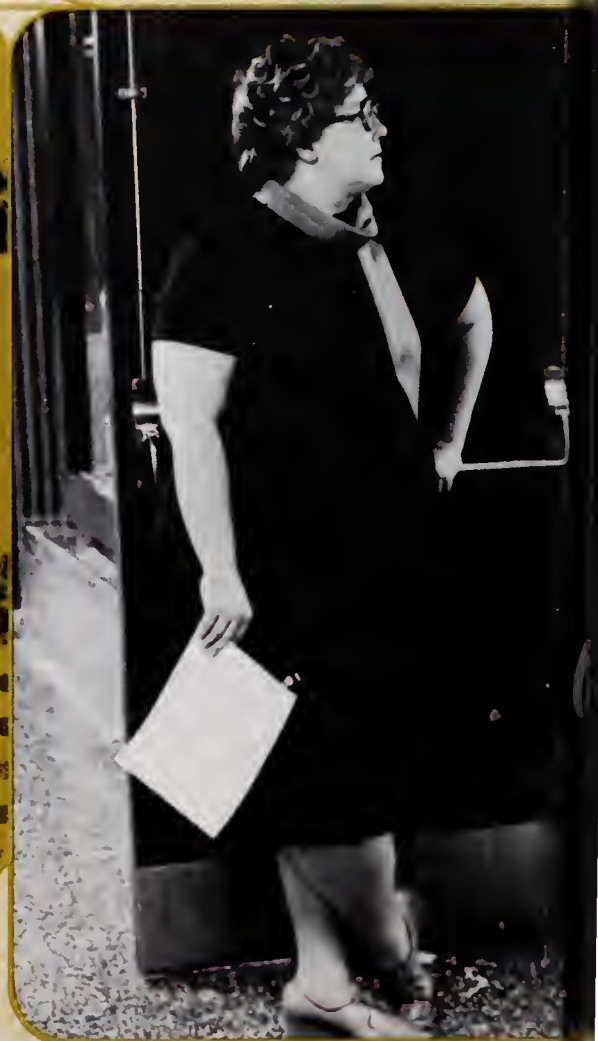

turning point list

Endless sounds of construction surrounded us—the whirring of power saws, the pounding of hammers on nails and mallets knocking out walls, the clanging of metal girders, and the roar of cement and delivery trucks.

As the work slowly progressed on the new junior high addition, confusion increased as we took detours to avoid men at work, bypassing ladders and scaffolding; we were unable to use that same old familiar exit because it was now a brick wall; and we occasionally had to sniff air thickened by hot, melting tar roof.

With all of this work going on about us each day, it was evident our school would never be the same. Underclassmen would be joined in the fall by a new group, the junior high students. And, after being accustomed to the surroundings for four years, visiting graduates would find an unrecognizable environment.

We were facing a turning point, a major change in our lives. As the months passed, we realized the alteration of our building was not the only turning point of the year, for we were surrounded by them.

Women's football field is crowded for the game and the cheering is deafening.

Our nation experienced several major turning points.

With the pageantry and festivities of the bicentennial year now over, we found ourselves no longer dwelling on the past. Rather, we began anticipating the future. We were experiencing, first hand, the movement into the third century.

This turning of the centuries was accentuated by the national election. A practically unheard of Georgian came on the scene; and November 2, James Earl Carter, better known as Jimmy, was voted into office as the thirty-ninth President.

Those who were eighteen were able to cast their first Presidential ballots. Others had a chance to display political allegiance in a mock election run by the government classes. Results disagreed with national totals as Gerald Ford whopped Mr. Carter 369-210.

The Equal Rights Amendment became an important issue as Indiana's legislature became the thirty-fifth state to ratify. After heated debate, much publicity, and public interest, it passed by a two-point margin, January 18, at 3:08 p.m.

National attention focused on Utah State Prison, January 17. Gary Gilmore, after gaining notoriety by demanding death, died before a firing squad. The death penalty had not been implemented since 1967.

When the student body and two neighboring communities became involved, they helped others; and we saw additional turning points.

Added to area events was the Monroeville Carnival, September 30-October 2. The effort was to cover the expense of the town's new Emergency Medical Service unit.

Hoagland area residents turned out for a fund-raising dinner and dance, March 19, to help purchase an electric wheel chair and lift for Mr. Erwin Kleine, one of our staunchest sports fans. Students, too, became involved, donating $308.

Cold, wind, snow, and energy shortages made us realize Nature's fury and respect her limited bounty when the Winter of '77 became tagged by experts as the "worst in history" and thus, a real turning point, experienced by all of us.

We were treated to a record-setting 12 days away from textbooks and extra-curricular activities when persistent Arctic air combined with an extremely heavy snowfall.

The mercury pushed down to minus 16, January 17; and violent winds, gusting to 55 miles per hour, plummeted the wind chill index to a dangerous minus 58, January 29. We were repeatedly warned against frostbite and unnecessary travel.

Events were cancelled by the hundreds, and many stayed close to their radios to catch emergency announcements concerning area conditions. Snow drifted so badly that the state requested emergency disaster relief to help clear highways, which was costing $350,000 per day.

Complicating the havoc was a shortage of natural gas. Northern Indiana Public Service Company urged users to turn down thermostats to 60 degrees at night and 65 during the day. Factories closed, laying off thousands, and shopping centers and groceries curtailed store hours.

Winter refused to give up. Two days after spring's official arrival, a six-inch heavy, wet snow again cancelled school.

People, building take major turns

(right) To fulfill one duty as a team captain in the annual magazine drive, junior Todd Ruhl counts out his team's receipts during homeroom period.

With total concentration centered on her work, senior Cindy Rosswurm carefully shapes the clay for her coil pot in Individualized Art class.

So wishes might come true, senior Cheryl Bosler and junior Eric Deohl blow out candles when they celebrate their birthdays in Yearbook class.

As she cuts her piece of the net, junior Robyn Scheumann rejoices the girls' basketball victory over South Side in the final game of the Sectional.

Within the school administration, a significant turning point took place when Mrs. Judith Najib was appointed assistant principal. She became the first female principal in East Allen County Schools.

In the September issue of DOWNPAT, Mrs. Najib commented, "I set goals for myself; and I knew that at a certain point in my life, this is what I wanted to be doing."

At the end of the school year, we realized another important turning point when we learned of the retirement of the school secretary, Mrs. Dorothea Holle, after 22 years of service and a transfer here from Hoagland upon consolidation in 1968. We knew we would miss her beaming smile and undying support and enthusiasm for all school activities.

Construction changes would bring a band room expanded with storage and practice areas; a stage embellished with new curtains, a sound system, and dressing room sinks; the journalism department, a darkroom; and the athletic department, a storage and dressing building near the football field. The kitchen was outfitted with a new machine for making hamburgers tastier and in only three minutes.

Each of us faced personal turning points as well. During lunch, the strains of "Happy Birthday" would float from the cafetorium, exchange students expanded our knowledge, and bouquets from dances were dried and became pressed memories.

It was a year abounding with change. Junior high construction affected us from the very first day. We soon found, though, our lives surrounded by major turning points.

Typifying daily academic turning points, junior Jahn Kaiser, art department assistant, carefully levels the cement as he creates a patter's wheel.

Turning Points: Student Life, Academics

As children anxiously await the arrival of Santa Claus at the Hoagland pavillion, junior Carol Gallmeyer holds her tired niece, Jennifer.

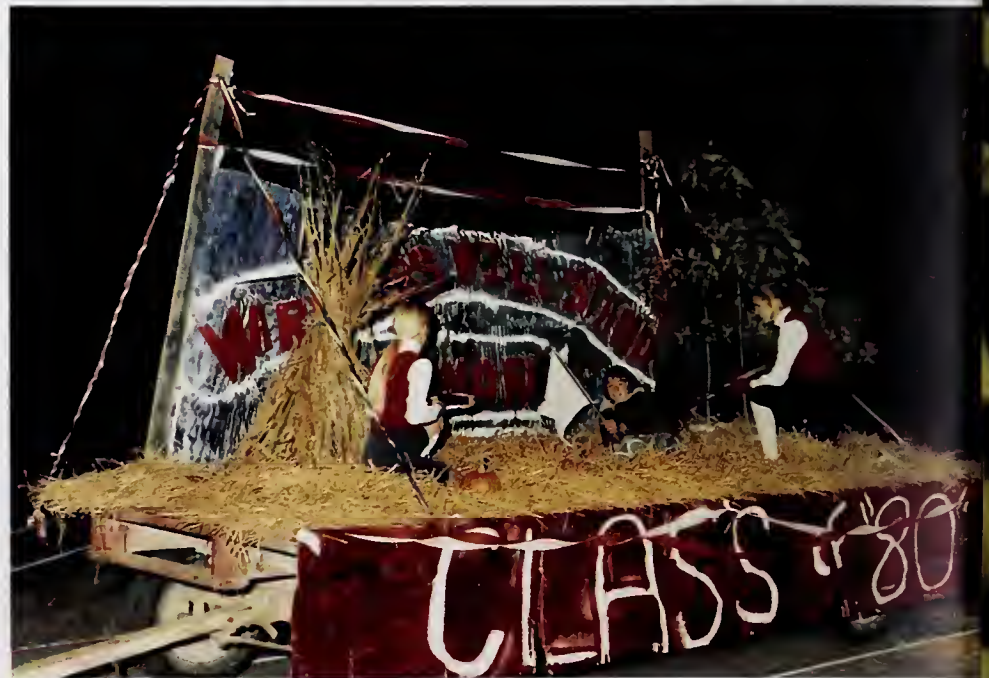

With the sun rising behind them, students enter the academic wing, a daily turning point.

Powder puff battle. spirit sticks add to festivities

(right) Amid the crowd in the main hall during homeroom an Dress-Up Day, freshman Cheryl Nahrwald listens intently to a friend as seniors Kelley Metheny and Lisa Presler use the time to sign yearbaaks.

(below) Intently listening to a game plan, seniors Lori Ross, Mory Conn, Vol Bergdall, and Lisa Minich prepare to play juniors in powder puff football.

Instead of the traditional car caravan, a new Lettermen's Club-sponsored event was added to Homecoming—powder puff football. Also breaking tradition was the advent of spirit stick competition rather than class poems at the afternoon pep session.

Approximately 40 girls clad in tie-dyed shirts composed the two powder puff teams, coached by varsity football players. The junior squad, emerging with a 14-0 victory over the seniors, was helped by "more practice and a lot of hard work," according to Mr. Gene Hany, Lettermen sponsor.

Thursday night, after the student body had been fired up at the pep rally, the bonfire was set ablaze by cross country runners who, just hours before, had been crowned Allen

County Conference champions.

After a week of special days, including Dress-Up Day and Lick 'em and Chew 'em Up Day, enthusiasm was evident at the Friday afternoon pep session as each class presented its skit and spirit stick. Seniors took first in the spirit stick competition with a 225-foot piece of plastic field tile carried in by the entire class.

After the band's halftime performance on Homecoming night, an array of color passed by the crowded stands as classes and clubs displayed their floats, representing hours of effort. Juniors captured the coveted Spirit Trophy for the first time.

Highlighting halftime was the crowning of senior Audrey Ottenweller, queen.

(right) In order to prove "actions speak louder than words," junior Dave Hegerfeld pantomimes a boxer for those enrolled in Communications class.

(below) Concentrating on placing the letters correctly on her guideline, junior Roxie Emenhiser formats her first headline in Journalism 1-2.

New journalism class trains future staffers

Making its appearance in the English curriculum was Journalism 1-2.

Offered to students interested in future work on the LANTERN or DOWNPAT staffs, the course emphasized writing, layout, and style. Practical knowledge was gained by projects, such as choosing a yearbook theme, designing an opening section to express it, and creating all types of yearbook layout styles from mosaic to mondrian.

extensively on customs and beliefs of Judaism. The class also visited the Bible Art Show, March 15, viewing graphic sketches from the 15th and 16th centuries.

Students in Developmental and Speed Reading classes demonstrated their comprehension of new vocabulary when they presented oral book reports instead of the customary written ones. For having shown enthusiasm, two girls received awards for reading over ten books during the semester.

For sense awareness, blindfolded Creative Writing students were asked to identify 13 foods ranging from pickled herring to smoked oysters to flavored yogurt.

During the second half of the Christmas Concert, Choir Director James Mergenthol directs a section of Handel's famous MESSIAH, "Hallelujah Chorus."

Choir honors parents at concert reception

Decorating for the Student Council's Christmas dance, sophomore Kristie Hoffman places a string of colored lights on the huge Christmas tree.

Just before Christmas break, two events spurred students' holiday reverie.

Concert Choir and Swing Choir presented their annual Christmas Concert in the cafetorium, December 21. Choir members sang ten selections while Swing Choir entertained with four season melodies.

Flutists, junior Carma Kleine and sophomore Dawn Kleinknight, accompanied the Choir for two offerings; and seniors Karen Sorgen and Dennis Schroeder were featured soloists for "Merry Christmas Darling."

For the first time, members honored parents at a reception held in the lobby after the concert. Cookies and punch were served by Future Homemakers of America.

Hours of decorating the cafetorium and lobby preceded arrival of approximately 70 couples attending Student Council's semi-formal dance, "Snow Magic," on the night before Christmas vacation, December 22.

Evergreen boughs and colored lights created a holiday spirit as students danced to the music of Misty Moods.

(right) In order to be able to hang a paper mural for the Christmas Concert, senior Sheryl Meyers puts pieces of masking tape along its back.

In an attempt to get students interested and involved in the Presidential election, Government classes held Political Awareness Week, October 18-22.

Posters decorated halls and windows, students made and distributed campaign buttons, and candidates made personal appearances. Speaking to classes were Mr. Dan Quayle, Congressman Ed Roush, and County Commissioner Dick Ellenwood. Students expressed views on political favorites and tried to sway opinions with in-class debates.

The following Monday, the mock election saw class members manning precincts as the registered students voted.

Students in Sociology for Self created self-image sculptures made of common household items, explaining their creations to class members. They also planned weddings and researched area history.

U.S. History classes heard junior Jay Crisp, a member of the 44th Indiana Regimental Squad, talk about the Civil War; and, to keep up on news events, students watched the "Today" show news program ten minutes each morning.

In full uniform of a 44th Indiana Regiment Union soldier, junior Jay Crisp speaks to a U.S. History class about the hardships of the Civil War.

Torn-out walls, ripped-up sidewalks, and layers of dust awaited 738 students as they arrived by car or in the 26 school buses on opening day, September 2. Once accustomed to the noise and confusion, all seemed to adapt to the construction taking place for the new junior high addition.

Freshmen met after school September 8 for Student Council's annual picnic, meeting new classmates, playing games, and enjoying hot dogs and the carry-in dinner.

Because they had placed their orders the previous spring, many seniors received their senior keys September 23.

Students filled the cafetorium and impatiently waited in line October 4 for LANTERN distribution. Expressions of all kinds appeared as they saw glimpses of themselves and friends in the '76 yearbook.

The next day, juniors and freshmen compared educational achievement with national norms by taking IOWA tests.

Ten team captains headed the juniors between September 28 and October 12 as they exceeded their goal and sold $9,743 in magazine sales, the most ever.

Even though the building itself, then, was not in its usual, ordered state, many fall traditions still continued.

While students enrolled in Science Department classes were dissecting minks and sharks, the Math Department was busy dissecting complex equations.

Earth Science classes used topographic maps to study land features and building structures as four new microscapes aided Biology students in their study of the functions of cells and genetics.

The Physics class studied astronomy, a new unit added this year and, during the last week of school, determined the mass of the facing bricks of the school. Meanwhile, Botany students took a field trip to Fox Island, April 20, to see examples of plants about which they had studied.

While General Math classes reviewed the fundamentals, Geometry students were learning about theorems, postulates, and corollaries. In Algebra 1-2, students set up and solved word problems; and those enrolled in Algebra 3-4 discovered synthetic division and exponential functions. As a final project, the Advanced Math class determined the probability of a player's getting a Yahtzee during a Yahtzee game.

To complete his Biology assignment, freshman David Grobner attempts to correctly identify a specimen by looking in the microscope.

While junior Roxie Emenhiser arranges the mink, junior Vol Meyer readies a needed tool to dissect the animal as part of a Physiology lab.

Three events meant special student involvement in November and December.

At the Student Council-sponsored Sadie Hawkins Dance, November 5, applause was the deciding factor in the Daisy Mae and Lil' Abner contest. When the noise had subsided, seniors Kim Springer and Mike Galligher had won the favor of the crowd.

The Athletic Department's supply of soap was replenished at the annual Faculty-Grad Basketball Game, November 18, as once again, those toting a bar of soap entered at a reduced price. The grads proved too strong, and the faculty was defeated.

Ten local speakers participated in the Eighth Annual Speech Tourney, December 18. They placed ninth out of 23 schools in attendance, the largest number ever.

Winning ribbons were senior Lisa Presler, fourth in Oratorical, and junior Brian Carnes, his first top spot in Humorous.

Aiding in the running of the tourney were 34 students on five committees.

With square dancing highlighting the Sadie Hawkins Dance, senior JaAnne Rasswurm enjoys the "circle four hands round" in "Roll Out the Barrel."

Added to equipment in the Business Department was an offset printing press, duplicating materials easier and faster than the previously popular stencil.

Girls enrolled in Intensive Lob learned to make the paper masters, run the press, and perform daily maintenance. Materials run included application blanks, program cover posters, newspaper clippings, and programs for school events.

The girls toured the Fort Wayne National Bank building, November 29. After three alarm devices were disconnected, they were permitted to enter the vault containing two million dollars and to hold a $1,000 bill. They also had the opportunity to visit Lincoln Life Insurance Company, IBM offices, and Mutual Security.

While those in Personal Typing were using 12 new manual typewriters, Typing 1-2 classes were taking two timed writings each week, aiming for a minimum of 32 words per minute with fewer than seven errors.

Bookkeeping classes spent approximately seven weeks working on practice sets while those enrolled in Shorthand 3-4 took dictation for real companies. The neatest and most legible letter was sent to each company. The class also formed a steno pool for teachers during the last grading period, offering same-day service.

Typing 3-4 students used 24 new electric typewriters when they concentrated on letter composition during the second semester. They attempted to always produce mailable letters, free of errors.

Offset makes duplicating easier

Late fall trips gave students an opportunity to see two different sections of the country. Near the end of October, a group traveled with the Taylor University Wandering Wheels, visiting Boston, Lexington, Concord, and Washington, D.C.; and November 10, 32 students traveled on the Taylor Possum bus to Florida.

Added to the winter activities was an intramural sports program during homerooms. After sign-up was held, over 90 male students registered in the two basketball leagues. The team captained by sophomore Todd Richman won the Freshman-Sophomore League, and senior Randy Lepper's squad captured Junior-Senior honors.

December brought two special convocations. Vocational classes met in the cafeteria, December 1, where butchers from Purdue University and Indiana Pork Producers showed them how a hog is cut into retail meat. The afternoon of Christmas break, Band and Choir entertained the student body with favorite seasonal music. During the pom-pom routine, Santa Claus made an appearance, throwing candy canes to the crowd.

Graduation preparations began December 13, when all seniors were measured for caps and gowns. To assure proper fit, height, weight, and head size were noted.

(below) For a Housing and Interior Design refinishing project, junior Monica Johnston brushes a varnish removing chemical on a child's chair.

After running their noodle dough through a pasta machine, senior Cindy Conrod and junior Carolyn Heintzelmon display it for the Foods 2 class.

To insure a perfect end-product, senior Kerry Hoffman, in Basic Foods, examines the cookbook's bread recipe for the proper kneading time.

Seated at the table during the Foods 1 smorgasbord, freshman Lorie Coleman and sophomore Joyce Habegger fill their bowls with lettuce salad.

In-class projects and outside speakers significantly contributed to study for those enrolled in Home Economics.

Foods classes, along with Vocational Agriculture students, attended a meat cutting demonstration in the cafeteria, December 1. Students watched as butchers from Purdue University and Indiana Pork Producers explained and showed how a hog is cut into various cuts of retail meat.

Using a pasta maker, the Foods classes also made noodles. The machine was utilized to roll four to six foot sections of dough and to cut it vertically for width.

Child Care students heard speakers on abortion, emotions, and patty training; and former English teacher, Mrs. Jane Hursh, demonstrated baby bathing.

Each girl in Family Relations traced her family tree and planned her wedding in full detail. To aid in the wedding planning, guest speakers offered ideas about flower arrangements, photography, bridal gowns, men's wear, and receptions.

While those in Housing were designing floor plans, Clothing students constructed outfits for the annual dress review as well as a notebook of sewing techniques.

Foods classes attend meat cutting convo

At the end of the musical comedy, 110 IN THE SHADE, the near-capacity audiences saw real water fall on the cast, as the rainmaker, Bill Starbuck, worked his miracle, bringing rain to end the drought.

Because of the change in the drama club's organization, for the first time in the school's history, the entire student body could try out for the production which played two nights, April 1 and 2.

Director Will Travis chose 28 to appear in what he called "the most sensitive and tender musical ever attempted here." Starring roles went to senior Denny Schroeder as the smooth-talking rainmaking con man, Bill Starbuck, and junior Carma Kleine as the plain, simple, love-starred Lizzie Curry. Supporting actors were seniors Shawn Benzinger, Brian Ruhl, John Deahl, and Karen Sorgen, and junior Brian Carnes.

Assistant director was Mr. Jim Schmidt, and vocal direction was handled by Mr. James Mergenthal. For the first time since 1971, a pit orchestra was utilized. The 18-piece group was directed by Mr. Verne Tussing. The 16 musical numbers were choreographed by Mr. Travis and Mrs. Mary K. Perkins of the Fort Wayne Ballet School.

Constructing the 27 new costumes and costume pieces were Mrs. Geraldine Wiegman, Home Economics teacher; Mrs. Phyllis Horman, former study hall supervisor; and seniors Pam Dawson and Carolyn Wietfeldt.

(right) To convince her father she is capable of a different personality, junior Carma Kleine mimics the actions of other women in "Raunchy."

(below) After jumping atop the picnic table, senior Denny Schroeder excites the townspeople about his promise to end drought in "The Rain Song."

(left) Just after their ride in the cauntry, seniors Karen Sargen and Brian Ruhl explain in detail what took place by singing "The Little Red Hat."

Field trips and exchange students aided those enrolled in French and Spanish classes, while Latin students concentrated on the written language.

Spanish students learned more about the Spanish customs as they had three exchange students in their classes during the fall. Another class activity was a trip to see Jose Greco, a flamenco dancer.

French students traveled to the Scottish Rite Auditorium in February to see a production of THE LITTLE PRINCE and were entertained at Snider High School by a French variety singing group from New York. On the last day of school, they picnicked on a French lunch on the lawn.

Emphasis in Latin was on reading as students made written comparisons between Roman and American cultures.

(below) To practice a conversation in French 3-4, senior Lennie Dadas answers a question asked by senior Hanneke Strik, exchange student from Holland.

Following the crowning of the king and queen, Bob Enterline and Robin Bearman, two unidentified male prom-goers, dressed as a gorilla and a bumble bee, invaded the Junior-Senior Prom. The creatures mingled with students and danced among the crowd.

Beneath the sparkling mirror ball, dancers moved to music of Endgame at Zoli's Chalet on Covington Road, May 14.

For 300 guests in attendance, the event was extended an extra hour.

Decorations expressed the evening's theme, "We May Never Pass This Way Again." Accenting the dance floor was a rustic bridge ornately decorated with flowers.

Selected as attendants for the royal couple were Cheryl Boyle, Roxie Emenhiser, Kathy Marquardt, Karen Bradtmueller, Deb Knapke, Dale Will, Lenny Dimke, Dennis Liggett, Terry North, and Brian Carnes.

In order to emphasize the color scheme selected to go with the theme, each table was decorated with a centerpiece of blue, yellow, and white flowers in a straw basket.

Brunswick Bowling Lanes provided the location for the After-prom, 1:30-4:00. Billiards and bowling made up the early morning agenda, costing $3.50 a person.

New equipment aids Art, Music

(below) While practicing for Band Solo and Ensemble Contest, senior Larry Hoffmon plays his part in the Brass Choir's "Theme in Four Variations."

Three new pieces of equipment aided those enrolled in art and music classes.

Art students in Advanced Arts, Metals, Ceramics, and Independent Art used a new potter's wheel, a portable one which was less awkward. Vocalists enjoyed a 6 foot, 6 inch Yamaha grand piano, while Band members utilized tape and recording equipment purchased by Band Parents.

Special projects in Independent Art included senior Cheryl Becker's study of glazes used in class, senior Carol Minnich's hanging lamp made of macrame ropes and ceramic pots, and senior Roxanne Garman's belt buckle, cast in silver.

At Solo and Ensemble Contest, February 19, musicians captured 25 firsts and ten second places. Among firsts were guys four with "Climbin' Up the Mountain"; large mixed, "Zip-A-Dee-Doo-Dah"; and Swing Choir girls with "Poor Man Lazarus."

Composed of 16 instrumentalists each, the woodwind and brass choirs performed "Cavotte" and "Theme in Four Variations."

In November, outstanding art students visited Fort Wayne Art Museum's "Art for Sale" exhibit, while in May, the 22 freshmen in Training Choir performed their rendition of "Freedom" at the Pops Concert.

Free form pep block cheers at home games

Snow, wind, and bitter cold marked the months of January and February, changing the daily routine. School was cancelled for an unprecedented 13 days. Social events, ball-games, and even semester exams were moved and rescheduled.

Annual basketball tourneys still occupied students. Hall signs wished the team luck and a pep session built momentum for the County Tourney, January 19.

After an absence of two years, a new pep block was formed prior to the tourney season. This time, no rules were set up for members to follow. Rather, space was just set off in the bleachers for those who wished to cheer at home games.

Teachers did their part to instill spirit by sitting in a block at pep sessions; and for the Sectional Tourney, they prepared a skit, featuring specially written words to "The Twelve Days of Christmas."

Students combined work with academics as they participated in Vocational Agriculture, Fort Wayne Regional Vocational School, and the released-time program.

Careers in agriculture, livestock production, and the welding and sharpening of tools were studied by the Beginning Vocational Agriculture students as those in second year concentrated on soils, small engines, and picnic table construction.

Third-year studies included engine overhaul and power trains, while fourth-year students learned farm management and built small storage barns. In the fall, all attended the Farm Progress Show.

Occupations ranging from service station attendants to waitresses to cashiers were held by 45 students as they learned outside the traditional school environment. These released-time students, attending only those classes needed to graduate, gained experience and learned skills for future employment as they left school during the day to maintain their regular jobs.

Due to cost and lack of participation, the Regional Vocational School was phased out; but seniors Sandy Wolff and Darren Will were allowed to finish their training. Wolff pursued her career in Health Careers; Will worked in Auto Occupations.

In order to put a hitch on a loading chute they are building for Vocational Agriculture 3-4, sophomore Joy Wagner holds the boards in place as sophomores Barry Scherer and Phil Sorg ready to help.

Just before she collects a customer's money at the L and K restaurant where she works, senior Tami Foote checks the total of the bill.

Band. Choir move concert

Through four annual spring events in May, students exhibited their talents.

Performing in the cafetorium for the first time, the Music Department presented the Spring Concert to approximately 500 parents and friends, Wednesday, May 11.

The Concert Band played seven selections. Featured were senior Larry Hoffman with a trumpet solo in "Quixote" and "Queen City March," recognizing all senior band members, directed by senior Andy Fry.

The Concert Choir, Men's Glee, and Ladies' Glee completed the program with thirteen songs. Featuring senior Choir members was "Graduation Day" by the Beach Boys.

Over 100 people, registered in nine different art classes, displayed projects at the Art Show, May 11. Ribbons were awarded to 31 students for their artistic talents. The Best of Show award was given to senior Julie Schuhler for her work on a handwrought brass bracelet made in Jewelry class.

"Suit Yourself and Save" was the theme for the Style Show, May 16. Senior Sandy Bultemeier won first place, for the second year, with an all-wool cashmere cape edged in fur trim. Other places went to junior Lynette Grabner, second, for a navy blue, gabardine, three-piece pant suit, and senior Karen Sorgen, third, with a green suede, short sleeve, summer dress.

The annual Pops Concert, May 17, was held in the front courtyard due to construction in the back. Featured were the Stage Band, New Arrangement, Swing Choir, Training Choir, and the Guys Four.

While playing a game of volleyball during an Advanced Physical Education class, senior Rhanda Grider prepares to serve the ball.

In a Living With Society loyalty and responsibility simulation game, freshman Elaine Huguenard concentrates on keeping her arms up.

You and the Law was an added unit in Living With Society, the values clarifications class. Not only were society's laws and functions studied in depth, but students were also informed about the rules and regulations of school and how they are formed.

A major activity, Alligator River, allowed students to rate the goodness of life and then tell happenings from which they had profited. A second portion of the game was to pick a crime and tell how it should be punished and, if the punishment were lessened, what the result might be.

Five quizzes, handball, basketball, football, softball, and badminton tested the skills of freshman and Advanced Physical Education students. Calisthenics consisting of push-ups, sit-ups, and jumping jacks headed the first minutes of class.

A professional laryngectomist, Mr. Harold Steinbacher from Allen County Cancer Society, spoke to Health classes on the results of smoking and methods of stopping.

Special convocations and homeroom tournaments varied spring routine.

The school became one of ten national test sites, May 12, for the Rick Trow Production assembly concerning career choices. Student reactions to the convocation in the ten schools were used to determine further use of the presentation.

Mr. Allen Bromfeld arrived April 29 to talk to juniors and seniors. Washington columnist and editor of American Futures, Mr. Bromfeld spoke to the group about America's future. He had come to Fort Wayne to present annual Freedoms Foundation awards and to speak to a Chamber of Commerce luncheon. The students were the only high school group in the area to hear him.

Intramural handball busied 20 girls and 54 guys during homerooms beginning March 1. Senior Shawn Benzinger topped senior Mike Galligher in the boys' singles, and junior Carol Blauvelt won over junior Jodi Smith in the girls' contest. Doubles champions were Smith and junior Cindy Harp and Benzinger and senior Brian Ruhl.

Student Council's annual ping-pong tourney saw Sten Ramel, exchange senior from Sweden, win the boys' singles while senior Cheri Scherer captured the girls' title. Doubles winners in the male competition were seniors Larry Hoffman and Roger Griebel; female honors went to sophomore Kristie Hoffman and freshman Kelly Hoffman.

In order to finish the upper maling on his Waads project, senior Stan Spieth prepares to clamp the crownpiece onto his grandfather clack.

Metals classes stress 'hands on' philosophy

To permit students to learn through their mistakes, a new "hands on" policy was stressed in Industrial Arts classes. Because first-year teacher, Mr. Kim Fisher, believes that "experience is the best teacher," students utilized machinery in the shops more than doing textbook work.

Those in Metals class set up project displays in the library. Among items exhibited were shifter handles, ashtrays, and wall plaques. Mr. Fisher explained his reasoning for the displays: "If a student really does exceptionally good work, it is a shame not to let anyone else see it."

Two changes occurred in Woods. It was extended to a full-year course and operated under a contract system. According to Mr. Kevin Sipe, instructor, this gave students more individual motivation.

While those in Woods were enjoying a larger assortment of power and hand tools, Electricity classes repaired small appliances, the baseball backstop, and choir room seats. They also delved into model rocketry and radio tracking.

New T-squares and drawing boards aided Drafting students when they drew their house designs. More females than ever before enrolled in the class.

While repairing a clock radio in electricity, sophomore Mark Stasell and senior Tam Baker make final adjustments on an oscilloscope.

To affix formica to the Journalism room tables, Mr. Kevin Sipe illustrates to senior Richard Barrand the proper procedure for applying contact cement.

Honors Day meant special recognition for both seniors and underclassmen.

Prior to the event, May 20, seniors were honored guests at a breakfast served by the faculty in the cafetorium.

During ceremonies, academic honors went to six. Senior Donna Porter was named Outstanding Intensive Lab student; senior Carolyn Wietfeldt was cited as Best All-Around Home Economics student; senior Connie Smith was announced Outstanding Business student; senior Val Bergdall won the Math and Science award; juniors Laura Trevino and Sue Davis shared the Outstanding Spanish student recognition; and junior Janelle Case was honored with the Art Department award.

Senior Mike Galligher received the Rocky Gilbert Award; senior Bill Henry, the Sauer Humanitarian Award; and senior Cheryl Bosler, the Beth Ann Hoffman Award.

Ten scholarship winners were announced, the members of Heritage Scholastic Honor Society recognized, and the top ten seniors received their gold tassels.

(below) To show appreciation for her many years of service, senior Lourie Stoppenhagen gives school secretary, Mrs. Dorotheo Holle, a token of gratitude.

(right) Because they threw their caps, seniors Dorlo Jones and Corla Capper check Carlo's to see if she somehow managed to get her own back.

Graduates toss 184 caps

Leading the 184 graduating Patriots into a commencement exercise filled with firsts were Valedictorian Michelle Sorg and Salutatorian Denny Schroeder. Carrying out the chosen class colors of red, white, and blue, girls wore white caps and gowns; boys, blue; and each displayed a red rose.

The most notable change in the event was when the audience saw all 184 caps exhilaratingly fly through the air after the class had been announced as graduated.

Breaking tradition, the seniors entered through the north gym doors, parading the length of the gym in order to come up the center aisle. With bleachers added to the deck area, seating capacity was increased by positioning the speaker's platform at the north end. The raised platform was ornately decorated with 10-foot pieces of red, white, and blue stage scenery and with the class motto, "We can always look back and remember, but today we look ahead and dream," on a red banner with blue letters.

Mr. Bruce Bendt, a member of Wandering Wheels at Taylor University, delivered the keynote address. He stressed two main points: freedom is not the right to choose, but the responsibility to choose what is right and that each graduate could be a part of God's plan for the entire world.

In her Valedictory Address, Sorg based her thoughts on a Carpenter's song, challenging classmates to say "Thank you" and "I love you" and ended with "We will keep the determination, hope, and courage that every graduate has within them now."

To provide music for the night, senior band members joined the Band in playing the "Theme from Mahogany," and a senior octette sang "Time is My Friend."

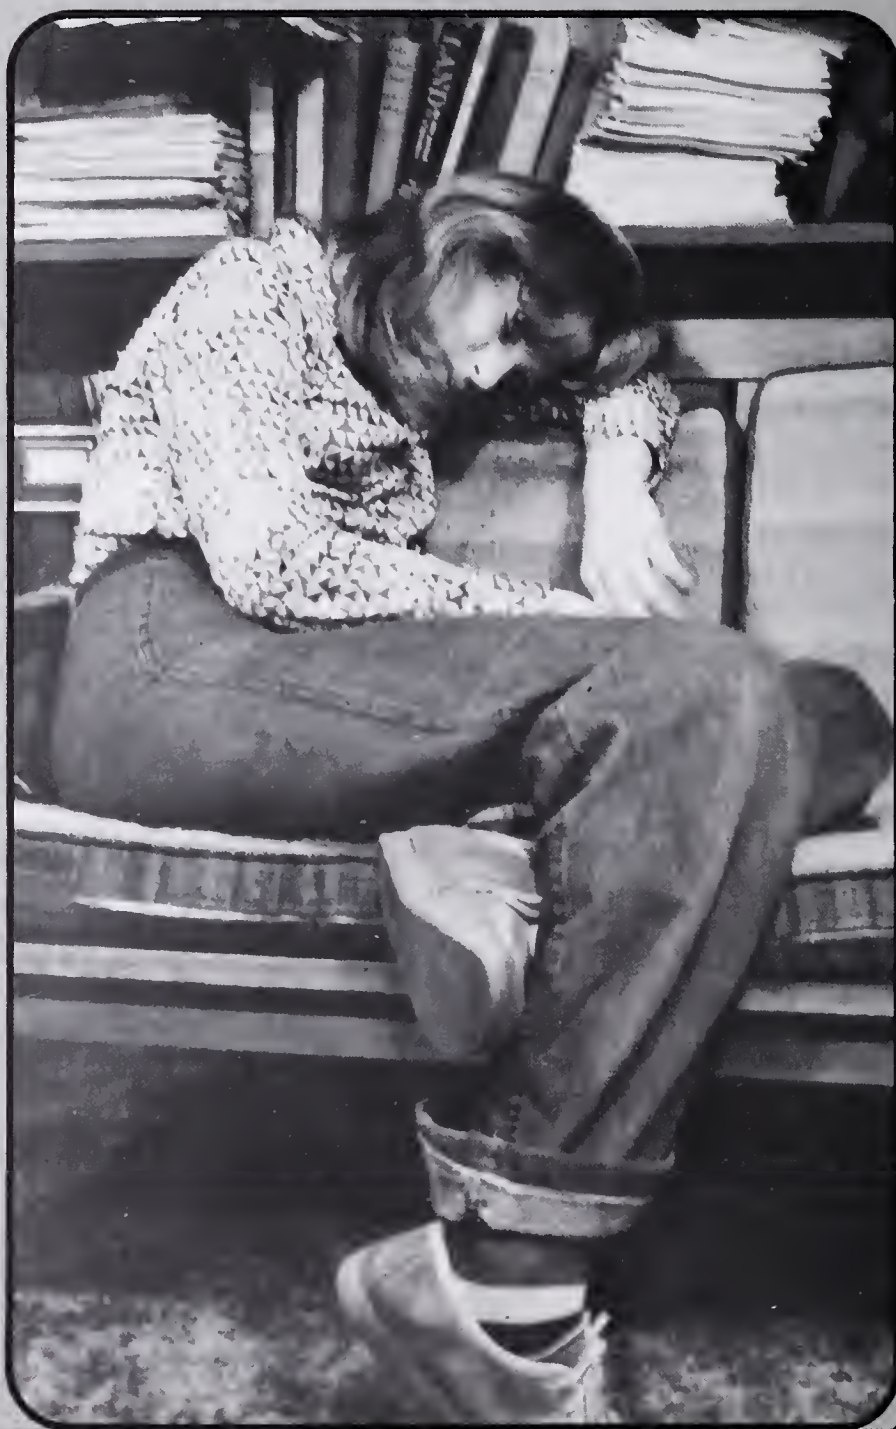

(left) After the ceremonies, seniors Bruce Cose, Don Goelz, and Randy Lepper took off their rented caps and gowns in order to turn them back in.

(below) As she twists a strip of crepe paper for the graduation decorations, senior Jody Krouter glances up to see if it is well fastened at the top.

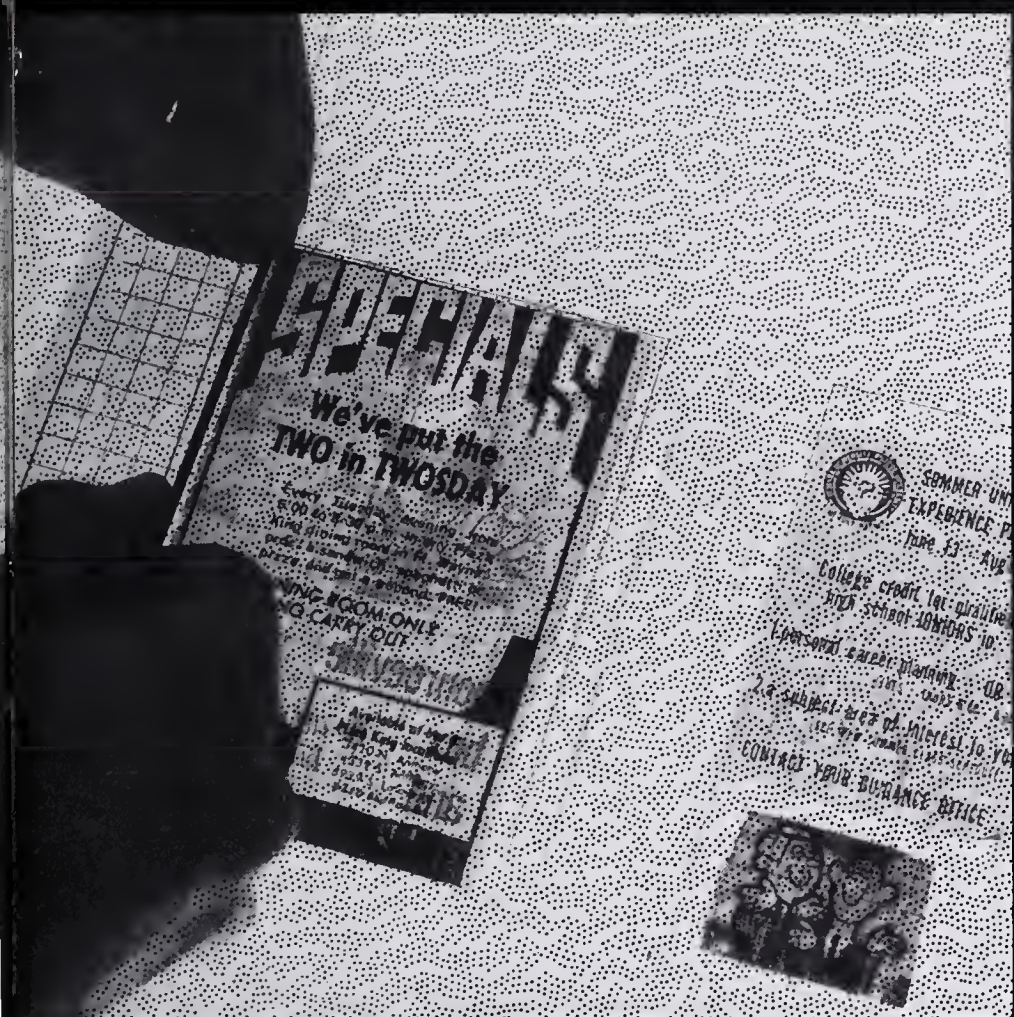

Sleep becomes a needed turning point for sophomore Kay Schnepp as she decides to take a rest from the activity at the Spanish Club Christmas party.

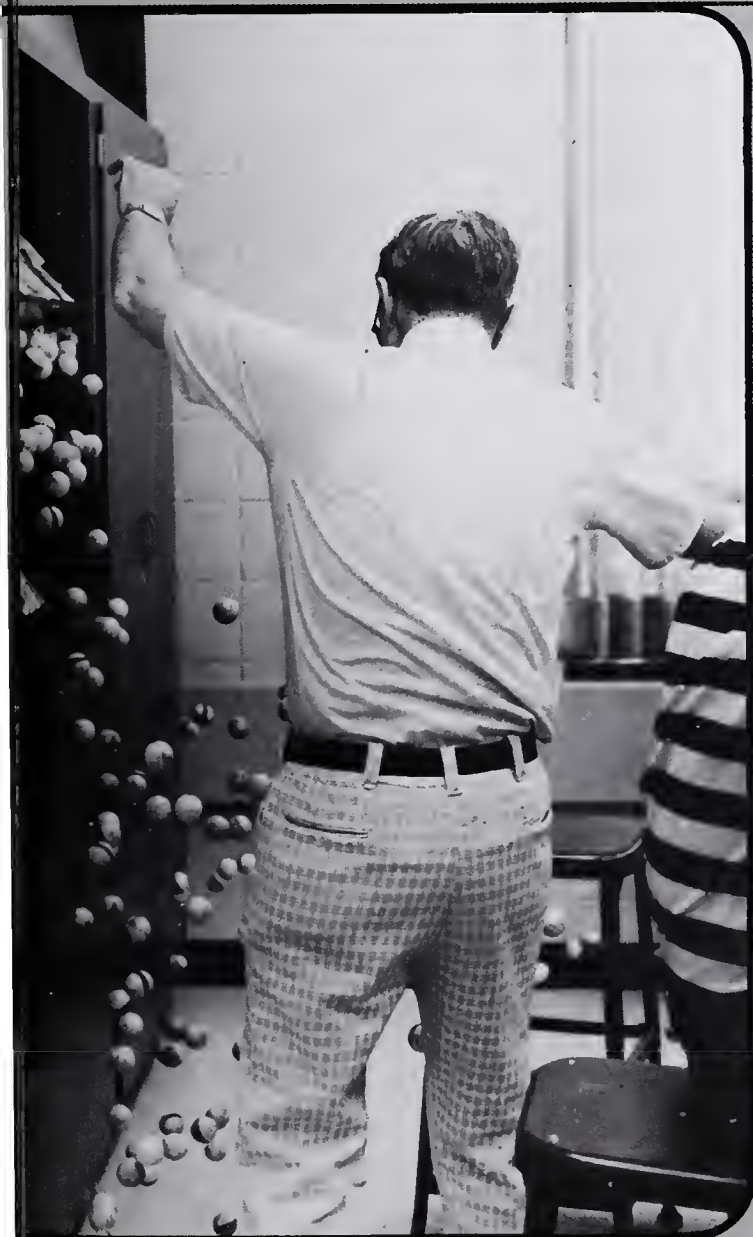

Turning Points: People, Advertising

Working at the light board, senior Edie Augustyniok, LANTERN Advertising Editor, turns basic information into an eye-appealing advertisement.

(left) As he lifts the magazine rack in the drafting room, Mr. John Compbell becomes instantly involved in the turning point of an April Fools' Day joke and is surprised by an avalanche of golf balls.

Doing their own thing...

(right) Not only has senior Bert Baese been involved in Hayburners, a 4-H horse and pony club, but she has also participated in many area horse shows, receiving a number of ribbons. Baese loves horses and can often be found practicing the rudiments of English equitation on her palomina gelding, Blaze.

(left) Juggling his script and a notebook, Mr. Will Travis, guest director of two Arena Dinner Theatre productions this season, explains to his cast the motivation behind their movements. Earlier in the season, Travis directed Neil Simons' comedy GOD'S FAVORITE. His second production, the Sondheim musical FOLLIES, challenged his theatrical ingenuity in all areas: set design, staging, choreography, and costuming. Crowning his initial efforts in community theatre, he received two Parky Awards: Best Director of a Play, GOD'S FAVORITE, and Best Director of a Musical, FOLLIES. Next year he will be a board member of the Arena Theatre as it begins its fifth season.

(below) Approximately eight years ago, senior Laurie Stoppenhagen began her dalli collection which today numbers over 30. Many of the tiny figures are mementos of trips Stoppenhagen has taken. One doll, a particular favorite, was made by an aunt who carefully coiffed the dalli's hair out of Stoppenhagen's own.

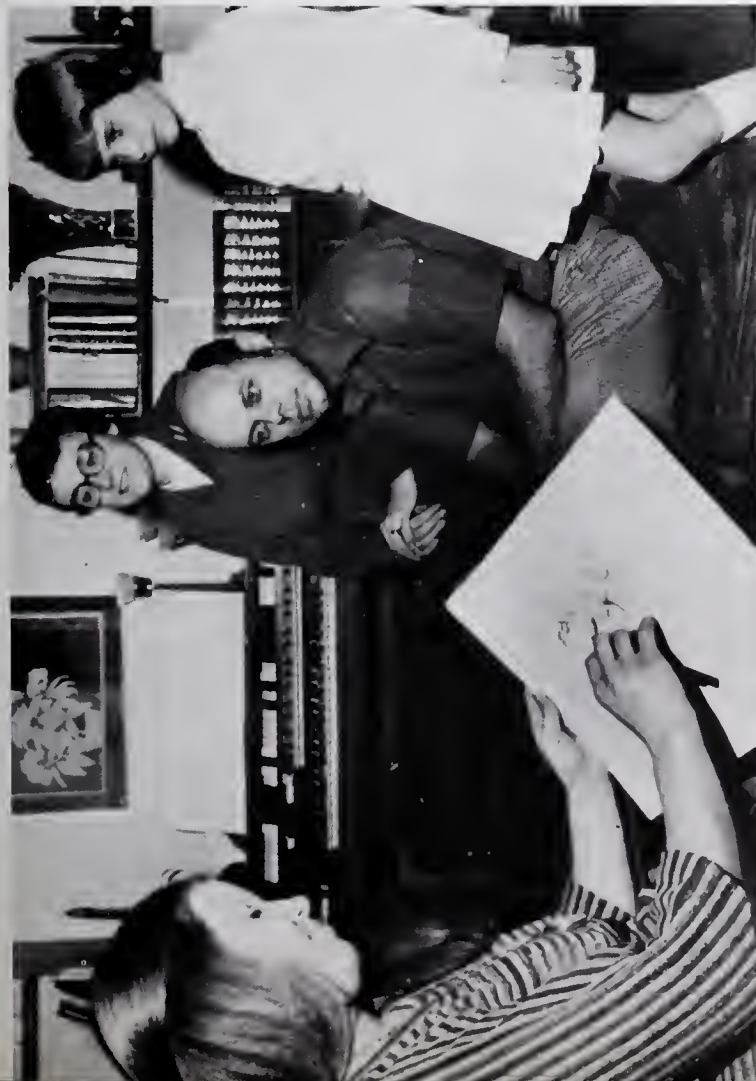

(left, middle) Posing for a JOURNAL-GAZETTE photographer, seniors Karen Sorgen and Rene Riecke, models on the Southtown Modeling Board representing Patterson-Fletcher and J. C. Penney's respectively, display the latest in millinery fashion for the Easter season. Both girls attended Confidence Clinics sponsored by the Southtown merchants, where they learned make-up techniques and practiced modeling movements and poise.

(left) In junior Todd Ruhl's basement family room is displayed his beer can collection of over 600 containers. Ruhl enjoys trading, with the exception of his prize item, a Berghoff beer can, discovered by his father in a barn. Its cone-shaped top with a twist-off cap piques the curiosity of many friends.

(above) As a result of their dedication to youth, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Kirk and their daughter Kelly were featured in the December issue of ECHO magazine, a publication about and for Eckrich Meat Company employees, as national family of the month. Senior Mary Gerardot sketches the Kirks who are actively involved in teaching Sunday school and Bible school at Covenant Presbyterian Church in New Haven. Mr. Kirk is a Big Brother in addition to his work with youth groups. Two years ago, the Kirks hosted an exchange student from Finland. Mrs. Kirk, a business instructor, participates in the system's Administrative Assistant Program.

(right) Trimming and shoeing horses, a trade learned by senior Darwin Mock at Kansas Horseshoeing School the summer before he became a junior, keeps him busily employed throughout the year. Mock can shoe as many as seven horses after school or up to ten during a summer's day. Mock is also a member of the Mid-States Rodeo Association. During the summer months, he rides broncs bareback in Ohio and Michigan.

(left) Besides adding her name to the faculty roster at mid-year as Mrs. Jane Hursh's replacement, Mrs. Jane Sullivan made Fort Wayne theatre history by winning the 1977 Parky Award for Best Actress in a Leading Role in a play at the Fourth Annual Arena Dinner Theatre Awards Banquet June 1. This trophy recognized her portrayal of Marian Jellico in ABSENCE OF A CELLO. Earlier in the Arena season, she created a convincing Rose Benjamin in GOD'S FAVORITE. Rounding out her stage appearances locally, Mrs. Sullivan acted in the Civic Theatre's production of Noel Coward's BLITHE SPIRIT.

Carrying their 225-foot spirit stick high above their heads as they entered the gym en masse, the 192 seniors captured a first place in the spirit stick competition at the Homecoming pep session. A length of plastic field tile, the stick was painted with red, white, and blue stripes.

Also capturing first for the class were their hall decorations. The main lobby was festooned with strands of red, white, and blue crepe paper; and the ceiling lights were covered with red and blue cellophane. The central focus was a Woodlan Warrior with a noose around his neck, sitting in a bathtub. The sign over him read, "Hang 'em up and wash 'em up."

The class' skit, based on the television series, "Gun Smoke," ranked second. Karen Sorgen and Cindy Bearman, watching the show, heard Shawn Benzinger narrate the saga taking place in Miss Kitty's saloon. A shoot-out occurred between the good guys (Patriots) and the bad guys (Warriors), when the good guys entered and asked the bartender, Stan Spieth, for a glass of milk.

White football-jerseyed good guys were Chris Painter, Benny Reinking, and Bryan

Enterline; the bad guys, dressed in black, were Bob Griebel, Roger Griebel, and Mike Tracey; and Miss Kitty's bar girls, wearing can-can outfits, were Rene Riecke, Lennie Dodos, and Nancy Fitzwater.

The only entry that did not place in competition was the class' float. Utilizing large cardboard cartoon strip characters, Snoopy, Charlie Brown, and a moving Woodstock, they carried out the theme, "A Patriot victory—mere peanuts." On either end of the float were two goal posts, and the bottom was formed of chicken wire stuffed with colored paper tissue. Riding the entry were Rene Riecke and Lennie Dodos.

Practicing with the volleyball team during a session after school, Bob Griebel sets the ball so that a team member can spike it across the net.

Preparations for graduation began early, as seniors were measured for caps and gowns December 13. They were rented rather than purchased as they had been for the past two years. Girls wore white; and boys, blue. Once again, the class chose the traditional red, white, and blue tassels.

White, three-fold invitations with silver lettering were selected. The school crest was embossed on the outside and inside was a gray etching of the school.

The red rose was selected by the group as class flower; traditional red, white, and blue for class colors; and the motto, "We can always look back and remember, but today we look ahead and dream."

Roger Griebel heads class for fourth time

After much dissension and discussion, seniors voted against buying a gift for the school. However, those persons disagreeing with the decision banded together and donated money for a school flag.

A Patriot, matching the one on the school shield hanging in the gym, was painted on the blue field by Carla Copper.

Because of class ranking and their SAT scores, 37 seniors were recognized by the State Department of Education, receiving commendation as Hoosier Scholars. And, in Honors Day ceremonies, ten other scholarships, awarded to class members by colleges and organizations, were announced.

Ranking at the top of the seniors scholastically, Michelle Sorg graduated Valedictorian with an 11.333 average on a 12.000 index while Denny Schroeder compiled a 10.733 for the Salutatorian spot.

Sorg also participated in the Century III Leaders Scholarship Program, her test and essay making her the school's first entry. Schroeder was selected by his classmates and teachers as the Daughter's of American Revolution Good Citizen.

Debra Gresley was recipient of the Betty Crocker Award. Her test score ranked high in the state in the General Mills Search for Leadership in Family Living contest. And, at the spring sports awards presentations, Rex Counterman and Kim Springer were named Patriots of the Year because of contributions in sports along with academic record and extra-curricular activities.

Congratulations To The Class Of 1977

To prepare for the annual Christmas Concert held December 21, Brian Cornes helps with decorations by hanging a poster on the cafeteria wall.

For the first time, juniors won the Spirit Trophy at the end of Homecoming week. The 186-member class kept seniors from continuing as traditional victors.

Trouble with the tape recorder did not stop the juniors from capturing first place in skit competition when they chose to present their version of the "Gong Show." Celebrity judges were Randy Troutner as Harry Holding; Robyn Scheumann, portraying Ollie Offside; and Val Meyer, introduced as Freddy Facemasking. Ritchie Myers acted as master of ceremonies.

Because they did not have enough spirit, Scott Beerman, Luke Selking, Doug Ford, and Dan Buchan, acting as Woodlan cheerleaders, were gonged by the judges. Todd Ruhl's strip tease was also gonged when he revealed the disappointing body of a Warrior. Trouble with the tape recorder halted proceedings momentarily and interrupted the Four Seasons' act. Dressed as the seasons were Mona Hoffman, Robin Bearman, Karen Bradtmueller, and Donna Hormann.

The final act of the day, judged the winner, was three Patriot Lettermen singing the school song. They were Bambi Scheumann, Kay Bienz, and Jill Scheumann.

Also capturing a first was the class' float. The theme, "Whip the Warriors," was carried out by utilizing a large mixing bowl made of chicken wire stuffed with red tissue and ten foot beaters made of metal with blue handles. Coleen Vardaman, dressed as a Patriot, held the beaters.

The junior hall decorations took third place. One special poster, picturing a Woodlan Warrior shooting himself and labeled with the popular expression of the year to indicate a lack of intelligence, "Deee," was created by Eric Deahl. Their spirit stick, carried into the pep session by Ritchie Myers, ranked fourth.

Despite Dress-Down Day distractions, Glynn Meienburg and Bambi Scheumann took notes while listening to a lecture during fifth period Academic Grammar.

In October, the annual magazine drive occupied juniors, as they set a new school record with $9,743.80 in sales. This meant a treasury profit of $3,897.52.

The class membership was divided into ten teams. At the end of the campaign, the team headed by Todd Ruhl had clinched first with sales totaling $1,703.16.

Leading the salesmen was Brian Carnes, followed by Todd Ruhl, Jill Scheumann, Joni Lehrman, and Mona Hoffman. Each won a cash prize while many fellow classmates were awarded posters and Patriot mugs.

Plans for the Junior-Senior Prom began in November. The first task of the class was to select a theme. To do this, a suggestion box was placed in the main office. From a list of possible suggestions, the class voted to utilize the song title, "We May Never Pass This Way Again."

Seven class members headed committees for the prom preparation. They were Terry North, Band; Bambi Scheumann, Location; Todd Ruhl, After-prom; Kathy Marquardt and Beth Holle, Pictures; Kay Bienz, Decoration, and Mona Hoffman, Centerpieces.

The group broke tradition when they added an hour to the dance. But, despite some discussion against the tradition, they once again nominated king candidates.

A near 100% vote moved the prom to an outside location rather than school grounds. Zoli's Chalet was chosen.

(upper right) At an after-school volleyball practice, Robin Bearman strains, jumping high at the net to return the ball to a fellow teammate.

Seven females, one male head juniors

Junior activities were led by seven females and one male. Class officers were Caroline Griebel, President; Lynette Grabner, Vice-President; Sherry Wenger, Secretary; and Kay Bienz, Treasurer.

The lone male, Terry North, served on Student Council with Cindy Harp, Roxie Emenhiser, and Bambi Scheumann.

At the annual Honors Day program, May 20, Tri Kappa Sorority again presented pins to the top two junior scholars. They were Terry North and Carma Kleine.

The Monroeville American Legion Post selected Mark Masenthin and Ryan Pope to attend Boys' State, June 11-18. The Auxiliary chose Carol Blauvelt for Girls' State, June 19-26. Alternates were Eric Deahl, Ed Steenman, and Lynette Grabner.

Fred Foote fills vacant top post

When the 186 sophomores returned, they found that Laurie Riegenbach, elected to the post of President the previous spring, had moved to another school.

Vice-President Fred Foote took over the office, aided by Cathy Shidler, Secretary, and Colette Meienburg, Treasurer.

Serving on Student Council were Penny Hockemeyer, Laurie Beauchot, Kristie Hoffman, and Jane Wyss.

Faculty sponsors were Mrs. Carol Scherer and Mr. George Wehrmeister.

To prepare for the upcoming mini courses, Laurie Beauchat studies the preselection list, not knowing that future snow days would cancel the activity.

(below) After winning the ACAC cross country meet, team member Dave Painter presents the trophy to Mrs. Judith Najib at the Homecoming pep session.

In their quest to win the Spirit Trophy during Homecoming week competition, sophomores decorated the lower academic wing hall with crepe paper, winning a second place in hall decorations.

For spirit stick competition, they chose a seven foot fiber glass tube, painted red, white, and blue, and inscribed with the words, "Sophomores High on Spirit." The stick was led onto the gym floor by Danette Muldoon and Carolyn Buchan. Inside the large circular tube was Kevin Voors. For the effort, they won second.

Also winning second for the class was their float entry. To emphasize the theme, "Brew Up a Victory," they made a witch's pot out of a large cistern basin and used corn shucks and pumpkins to finish off the decorations. Riding the float were Linda Coddling, Sally Rorick, and Tammy Klinker, all dressed as witches.

The pep session skit involved ten members of the class. Lynnda Kiess refereed a football game between the Patriots and over-weight Woodlan Warriors. Playing on the Warriors' team were Sally Skinner, Theresa Leal, and Cassie Metheny, each stuffed with several pillows for weight. For the Pats were Marci Wisniewski, Linda Coddling, and Tori Augustyniak. Portraying untalented Warrior cheerleaders were Dave Painter, Fred Foote, and Kenny Bultemeier. The skit was ranked in fourth place.

36 sophomores take driver's education

Sophomores found driver's education and class rings an important part of their second year of high school.

After having already completed the required book segment of driver's education and obtaining a temporary driving permit, 36 sophomores enrolled in the actual driving phase of the course.

Gaining experience on area roads, major highways, and in city traffic, each had to spend six hours behind the wheel of the car and 12 to 18 hours riding and observing the others in their car pool.

Once the driving segment had been satisfactorily completed, the drivers were able to take their final driver's tests for a permanent license when they reached the age of 16 years, one month.

The choosing of class rings took place March 4. After selecting the style and stone color, they placed their orders which were delivered April 28.

When a final tally was made after opening day, 187 freshmen had added their names to the list of future graduates.

Contrasting looks of bewilderment and anticipation appeared on their faces as they entered the main doors for the first time and surveyed the crowd in the main lobby, searching for familiar faces of classmates from their eighth grade classes.

They soon followed the advice of upperclassmen and repeated announcements from the office and discovered the placards in the hall across from the library, indicating the location of their homerooms.

After being directed to one of ten rooms by an upperclassman serving as guide, they faced the task of filling out data cards and reading computerized schedules.

End of homeroom brought more confusion as each located six classrooms during the run-through of ten-minute classes. Determined, some ended the morning wading through crowded halls to try locker combinations.

Freshmen face hectic opener

Shoe game tops picnic

After only five days of classes, freshmen enjoyed a break, invited as special guests of Student Council and faculty at the annual Freshman Picnic, September 8.

Tradition was broken when the location for games had to be moved from the west side of the building to the lawn area north of the parking lot because of the construction for the new junior high addition.

After all had removed their shoes, the shoe relay brought cheers of encouragement from teammates as each attempted to find his shoes, put them on, and carry the unwieldy collection to the next player.

Once entrenched in the routine of their new environment, the class' first duty was election of officers. Selected to lead were Penny Bidle, President; Ann Barkley, Vice-President; Jill Pequignot, Secretary; and Stephanie Arick, Treasurer.

Chosen to represent the class on Student Council were Pam Becker, Jim Griebel, Kelly Hoffman, and Dawn Scheumann.

Apparently lost in thought, Jill Rebber watches as fellow Spanish Club members engage in activities during the party at Mindy Burroff's house.

After a Harding back has eluded the tackle attempt, end Bill Beard turns to watch as a teammate tackles his opponent, aiding in the 6-0 win.

While covering his left eye with his hand, Larry Woodruff recites the letters from the chart for an eye test given by Nurse Jonice Lehrman.

At a distinct disadvantage since they had never experienced Homecoming, freshmen entered the hectic action with enthusiasm, hoping to display the best effort possible on first all-class involvement.

They soon discovered the many hours of work needed to create hall decorations, a complete float for the parade, a pep session skit, and a spirit stick.

By week's end, they fared far better than most of their predecessors in Spirit Trophy competition, receiving only one last place rating—hall decoration.

Their skit, entitled "We're the Cheerleaders," captured third. It dealt with spiritless Woodlan cheerleaders unsuccessfully convincing the student body of Warrior enthusiasm and pep.

Wearing ill-fitting, sloppy T-shirts emblazoned with "W's" to signify Woodlan were Stephanie Arick, Julie Beal, Jane Kaiser, Karen Beauchot, and Ann Barkley.

With the theme "Warriors will stand no more," the class' float was awarded third. Displaying a field of corn near a woods, a Woodlan Warrior, portrayed by Jim Griebel, was waving a white flag, indicating complete surrender. He was held at bay by two Patriots, Penny Biddle and Stephanie Arick, aiming muskets at their prey.

As class members cheered loudly, Kelly Beerman carried in the third place spirit stick at the pep session. It was a tall pole, measuring eight feet in height and four inches in diameter, painted in equal areas of red, white and blue.

Staff changes involve ten; two receive special honors

Resignations and maternity leaves brought six new faces to the staff.

Adding their names to the faculty in September were Miss Julie Haynes in Social Studies, Miss Jane Baker in English, and Mr. Kim Fisher in Industrial Arts.

When Mrs. Jane Hursh and Mrs. Pam Moore left to have their babies, Mrs. Jane Sullivan joined the English faculty after Christmas vacation, and Mrs. Cheri Gilbert was added in Physical Education and Values for the last nine weeks. Another replacement was Mrs. Shirley Troutner as resource center para-professional upon the resignation of Mrs. Linda Bailey in April.

Special honors went to Mrs. Judith Najib, assistant principal, and Mrs. Nancy Kirk of the Business Department. Both were nominated to Delta Kappa Gamma, an international honorary for outstanding women educators. Mrs. Najib was also selected for membership in the professional educational fraternity, Phi Kappa Delta. She was one of the first women ever selected by the Fort Wayne chapter. Mrs. Kirk's family was selected by Eckrich Meat Company as its national family of the month for December.

The annual Christmas party for staff was held at Baer Field Inn, December 9. The seven members of the Social Committee planned a white elephant gift exchange and the playing of a simulation of the television game show, "Jackpot," called "Crackpot." Prizes went to those who could correctly guess the staff members' names which were the answers to the riddles.

An end-of-year luncheon, May 31, honored two retirees, Mr. H. Bill Williams, math instructor, and Mrs. Dorathea Holle, school secretary, as well as two others leaving, Mr. Don Waldrop, basketball coach, and Mr. Rusty Girardot, head custodian.

Two pep sessions and a breakfast for seniors were among the staff's activities. For the Adams Central football game, the faculty based a skit on the nursery rhyme, "Ten Little Indians," changing it to "Ten Little Jets." Each Jet was represented by a faculty member dressed in costume.

On the afternoon of the Sectional Basketball Tourney, they rewrote the lyrics to the song, "Twelve Days of Christmas," singing it at the all-school pep session.

As a final tribute to graduates, faculty served breakfast to them, Friday, May 13, the morning of Honors Day. Seniors enjoyed doughnuts, coffee, and orange juice and received a small facsimile of a diploma, tied with blue ribbon and inscribed with a good luck greeting from the staff.

Staff members also showed support of the basketball team when they sat in a block at pep sessions and thus challenged the student body to display its spirit.

Turning Points: Organizations, Sports

Wins at two street fairs, their first trophy, and a first at contest accentuated the year for Swing Choir members.

At the Bluffton Street Fair, September 23, the group placed third out of the six performing. This placing gave them their first trophy ever. For the third consecutive year, they captured first at the Auburn Street Fair, September 28. Their program included "You Do Something to Me," "Magic to Do," and "Life Is a Song Worth Singing."

Selections from Broadway meant a first place at the annual Swing Choir Contest, January 22, at Fort Wayne Snider High School. They performed "Send In The Clowns" from A LITTLE NIGHT MUSIC and "Rhythm of Life" from SWEET CHARITY, choreographed by Mr. Will Travis, drama director.

A new performance opportunity was provided by an invitation from the Fort Wayne's Women's Club in December.

The group's new outfits were beige shirts and navy pants for the guys and beige tops and navy jackets and slacks for the girls. The girls' jackets were accented by Indian print yokes; and for formal occasions, the girls wore Indian print skirts.

Besides performing at the Christmas concert, members also sang on the Wayne Rothgeb television show and for a group of adult 4-H leaders in Hoagland.

At the Pops Concert, May 17, the group's program included special dance movements for a fifties medley.

Bluffton Street Fair performance captures first trophy

Two workshops gave three DOWNPAT and one LANTERN member the chance to express their designing and managing abilities.

At Ball State, seniors Randy Oberley and Bob Griebel took a Layout class; and senior Roger Griebel spent time in an Editorial Management class emphasizing staff relations. In his class, Bob Griebel earned an award for redesign of a publication.

Tri-State was the site of the workshop attended by LANTERN editor, senior Denny Schroeder. During the week, Schroeder received a Best Page Design award.

Balloons of all colors, printed with the slogan, "Catch a Cheap Buzz with DOWNPAT," were the main attraction of the sales campaign, September 20-24. The staff members created buzzbooks to be given away with each subscription, encouraging students to purchase the newsmagazine.

To overcome the possibility of ending the year in debt, the group published and sold a Guide to Area Schools, containing 30 maps, which gave students directions to away-from-school games and spring meets.

To start off in a faddish manner, the LANTERN staff entitled their sales campaign, "You, You're the One." Salesmen wore McDonald hats and decorated the main stairwell with a "Big Mac" character. Proving the success of the campaign was the selling of over 600 books, highest ever.

The 1976 LANTERN received a Medalist from Columbia Scholastic Press and an All-American from National Scholastic Press.

All-state nomination goes to Counterman

Nomination of senior Rex Counterman to the All-State football squad was a first. About the citation he stated, "This was a great reward and honor." To gain recognition, Counterman set three records: most yards rushing, most rushing attempts, and most points scored in a career.

With a 4-6 record, this year's varsity football team failed to match last year's winning season. This was partly due to the knee surgery of senior Shawn Benzinger. Senior Bill Henry and junior Lenny Dimke also played with injuries all season.

With the disappointment of the season,

Waiting for junior center Tony Weaver to hike the ball, senior quarterback Benny Reinking yells out the count in the win over Adams Central.

Coach Dale Guingrich commented, "We definitely were disappointed in the over-all outlook as far as win-loss record. It was a good year, though, to show that we were competitive with any team on our schedule."

For the fans and the team, the Adams Central game was probably the highlight of the season. Prior to the game, the team hadn't played well against Harding and had lost to Wayne. But, as Coach Guingrich stated, "Team effort made things happen. It was a very spirited game."

Of all the teams in his coaching career, Coach Guingrich indicated this year's had a lot of individual talent and skills, more than any other. However, he added, "They lacked that certain leadership to win."

As a combination service to students and a money-making project, 23 members of Future Homemakers of America sponsored their first Department Store, October 18-22.

The store stocked a variety of small useful items ranging from stationery to candles. With the sales campaign urging purchase for Christmas gifts, students browsed and made selections during fourth period lunch hour. The most popular item and biggest seller of the week was the apple bank.

During the summer, the group entered a float in the bicentennial parade for Hoagland Days. Emphasizing the theme, "Happy Birthday America—200 Years," the float sported a three-layer cake.

At the fall District meeting at Northrop High School, the girls were presented an Honor Chapter award for their work during the 1975-76 school year. Only four of 17 chapters were so honored.

For Homecoming, members turned thoughts to creation of a second float. Stressing the theme, "Cream the Warriors," the float featured a teepee and three Patriots throwing cream pies at three Warriors.

Service projects included lap robes and fruit-filled stockings for Lutheran Home residents and, at Easter, an Easter egg hunt for Hoagland children.

Balance in both offense and defense was cited as the key for freshmen and reserve football squad success.

Reserve Coach Dale Guingrich and Freshman Coach Kim Fisher agreed offense moved the ball well while defense play resulted in less time on the field.

What Coach Guingrich called "one of the most exciting plays of the year" occurred in the final minutes of the Leo game. Sophomore Jim Bosler, returning a kickoff, ran for the winning touchdown.

Commenting on the respectable 5-2 record, Coach Guingrich remarked, "We won because we played together as a team."

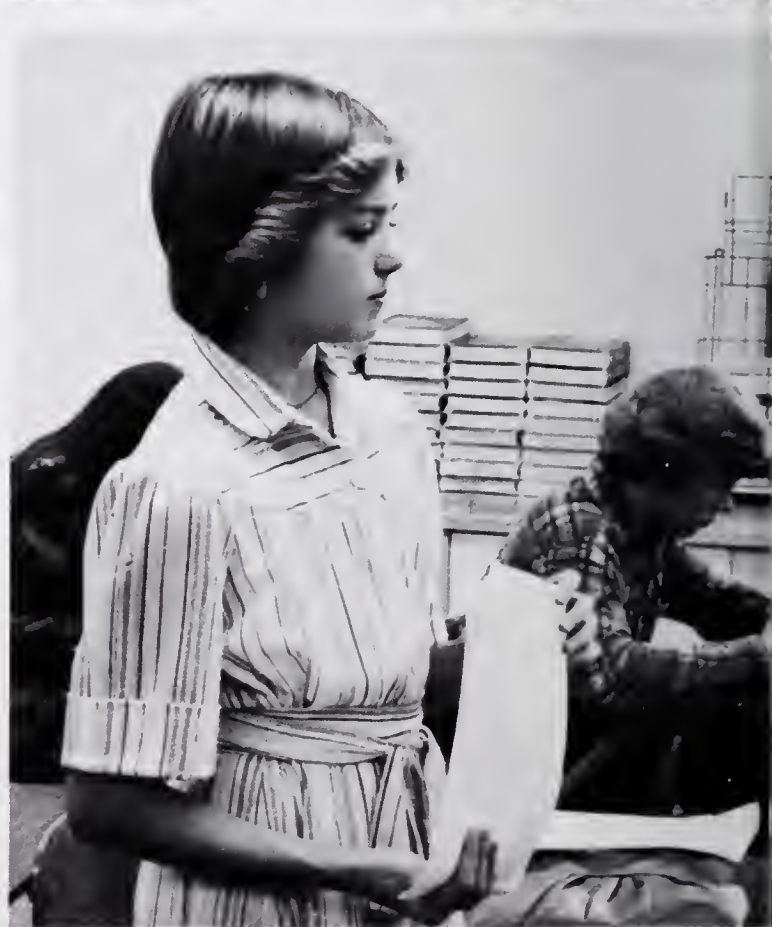

Although the freshmen did not end the season with a winning record, they did manage a thrilling contest against the Norwell Knights, smashing them 54-6.

Coach Fisher felt more potential and talent was evident in the team than was indicated by its 3-4 record. He emphasized, "While playing, they showed success in maturity and confidence."

Council adds new event, 'Snow Magic,' to holiday agenda

After aiding teachers in readying their rooms upon return in September, Student Council embarked on a year of providing entertainment for the student body.

Four dances made the group's agenda. At Christmas they added a new event to the calendar with "Snow Magic," December 22. Approximately 70 couples danced to the music of Misty Moods as the cafetorium was transformed into a holiday scene with evergreen boughs and colored tree lights.

The members joined other area councils in an effort to support the muscular dystrophy campaign. Held April 23 in order to coincide with Jerry Lewis' yearly telethon, a dance marathon not only provided fun but also funds to fight the disease.

Further diversion was provided with sponsorship of convocations, including one with a karate expert; the Faculty-Grad Basketball Game; and the annual ping pong tourney with singles and doubles contests, held during homeroom periods in March.

Exchange of ideas highlighted the trip for the five members attending the national convention in Portland, Oregon, June 20-24; the state convention at Delta High School in Muncie; and an exchange day with Leo High. Six students visited here March 24 while five members were guests at Leo.

Two further projects were the sale of T-shirts imprinted with the school name and year of graduation and the members' serving as a reception committee on the school's first parent visitation day.

At an after-school work session to work on the Y-Teens' Homecoming float, sophomore Lori Love stuffs Kleenex into a football formed of chicken wire.

Pumpkins and napkins became main supplies for Art Club members and Y-Teens as they worked on two major projects.

After carving the pumpkins themselves, Art Club members inserted candles and used the jack-o-lanterns to light the pathway to the school woods where they celebrated Halloween with games and refreshments.

The members entered the Homecoming float parade with the theme "General Guingrich and Colonel Wehrmeister Re-enact the Warriors Last Stand." Patriots armed with antique guns, a large teepee, and simulated fire carried out the theme visually.

For the Christmas season, the group once again sold ceramic nativity sets. However, this year, the response was exceptional, for they sold more than ever before.

Then, in March, the members concentrated on textile silk screening as they made printed T-shirts for themselves.

Y-Teen members employed napkins for their float in the Homecoming parade. With a ping pong table serving as the field, the float carried a large chicken wire football stuffed with napkins. Flanking the field were two goal posts and two Patriots.

Juniors Monica Johnston and Debbie Brown participated in the March of Dimes Walk-A-Thon, raising nearly $100. Meanwhile, members made hospital brighteners for patients at St. Joseph's Hospital.

As a money-making project, the girls picked and pressed apples into cider. The success of the venture was apparent when they had more orders than they could fill.

In March, the girls held a second membership drive. To create interest, they placed jelly beans in a container in the library, offering the 540 beans to the girl who came closest to guessing the number.

Endurance, stamina, and team strength led the cross country team members to an 18-1 season record; a win in the Adams Central Conditioner for the fifth time; and to their goal, placing first at the Allen County Athletic Conference (ACAC) Meet.

Coach Don Sarrazine commented on this important victory: "It was very satisfying to share the joy of these young men who had worked so hard to achieve the goal of winning the ACAC Meet. Winning brought the most satisfaction of the season."

Energetically, sophomore Dave Painter smashed all records by placing first at every dual meet and the ACAC contest.

Although the Manchester Invitational and Fort Wayne Sectional were not counted among first places for Painter, they did not detract from his over-all success. "Wiping out around a tree during the Sectional hindered me," confirmed Painter. "I could have done one or two places better."

Along with Painter's tremendous effort, top season runners were sophomore Mark Minnick; juniors Ritchie Myers and Jim Hoffman; and seniors Mike Galligher, Rick Roy, Dean Miller, and David Albersmeyer.

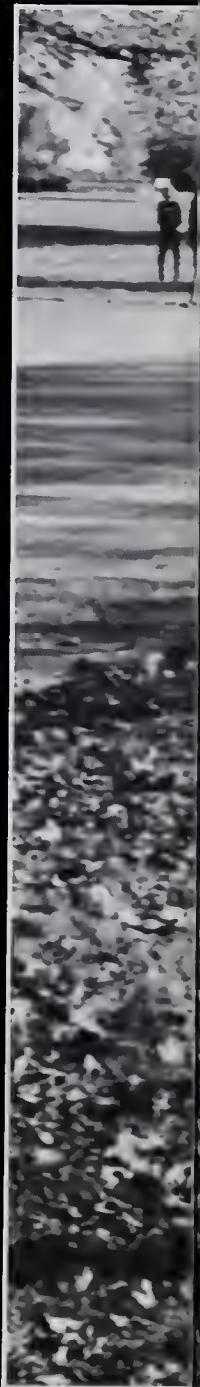

Some memorable moments were Painter's and Galligher's making the ACAC All-Conference team and Painter's thirty-sixth place in the Regional, the best ever.

Boys who took three highest honors at the Adams Central Conditioner were Painter and Galligher, first; Roy and Albersmeyer, third; and Minnick and Hoffman, fifth.

"This was our best season ever," said Coach Sarrazine affirmatively. "These young men possessed the ingredients needed to be successful: pride, enthusiasm, intelligence, and strong pairs of legs."

Band competition features routine to 'Ease on Down'

For the crowd's entertainment at the basketball game against Norwell, senior Kelley Metheny concludes the pom-pom routine to "Saturday Night."

Scarecrow-like arm motions and quick hand gyrations animated the Band's rendition of "Ease On Down the Road," October 2, at the NISBOVA State Marching Contest held at Concord High School. Completing the first-place presentation was a medley promising hope for the nation's future course in the area of international diplomacy.

Practicing for end-of-summer engagements began June 2 and continued through August. The troop marched in Fort Wayne's 4-H and Decatur's Halloween parades. Local patrons observed their drills at Hoagland Days and the Monroeville Carnival. Crossing the border into Ohio, the Band was the featured attraction at Payne's fair.

The Band Parents complemented the existing speaker system by contributing $1,300 in recording and playing equipment.

Three contemporary selections made up the group's entry for the NISBOVA Concert Contest, April 30: "Queen City March," "Prerogatives," and "Jubiloso."

Highlighting the spring concert was senior Larry Hoffman's trumpet solo.

ACAC squad includes three; girls face male

Three volleyball players were recognized for season efforts. Seniors Dale Martin and Jeff Gerardot and junior Carol Blauvelt earned All-Conference berths, and Blauvelt also copped the first Most Valuable Player award at the Athletic Banquet.

Under the direction of new coach, Mr. Kevin Sipe, male team members finished with a solid 6-2 record, capturing the Allen County Athletic Conference (ACAC) title. They also took first in ACAC Tourney action.

All 15, including nine seniors, were returning players. This, according to Coach Sipe, assured success, along with "defense, quickness, and offensive power."

Senior Jeff Gerardot emphasized the experience by saying, "We played together for four years; that's why we won."

Because of a new ruling permitting boys on girls' squads, the girls faced a Carroll team sporting a 6 foot, 1 inch male. His presence made the game the toughest of the season, confirmed Coach Pam Moore. "It was a challenge both mentally and physically," she explained. "The difference in height was a great disadvantage for us."

After a win over Adams Central, the girls were unable to match last year's win of the ACAC Tourney crown, for they were ousted by Leo, 1-2. "I was disappointed," stated Blauvelt. "I really wanted to win."

With a bullet-like leap into the air, senior Jeff Gerardot keeps the ball in play in the ACAC tourney by bumping it back across the net.

Sponsorship of a needy family offered Choir members a unique opportunity.

Cooperating with the Fort Wayne Christmas Bureau, the group sponsored a fatherless family of six. After the members collected the clothes and toys, they were presented to the family by the Bureau.

Christmas activities also included a performance in the lobby of Lincoln National Bank in Fort Wayne, a live broadcast for WOWO Radio's Penny Pitch, and the annual Christmas concert, December 21.

On their annual tour in the fall, members entertained children at Hoagland Elementary School and Gethsamane School for the Trainable Retarded and elderly residents of the University Park Nursing Home.

The program for Lenten services at Epworth Methodist Church included 15 selections by Choir, Swing Choir, and ensemble groups and featured piano solos by sophomore Theresa Leal and senior Cheryl Bosler.

Selected for presentation at State contest, April 30, were three numbers, including the musical version of the famous Robert Frost poem, "The Road Not Taken."

After leading the race for the Allen County Athletic Conference (ACAC) title, the varsity basketball team bowed to the Carroll Chargers, ending the season with a disappointing record of 6-14 and as co-runners-up in the ACAC race with the Leo Lions and the Adams Central Flying Jets.

Beaten by Carroll, 78-60, in the ACAC Tourney, they again suffered defeat in the Sectional against the eventual Regional champions, the South Side Archers.

Coach Don Waldrop was pleased with the team's effort in the game and commented, "The guys played with intensity and concentration. Overall they gave their supreme effort even though the scoreboard did not show their extra practice and work."

Senior Benny Reinking reached a unprecedented accomplishment as he scored his one-thousandth career point in the game against Norwell and finished fourth on the all-time high Allen County scoring list.

Reinking also captured a place on the All-ACAC team, received special mention to the All-State team, and was named NEWS-SENTINEL's "Player of the Week" in February.

Senior Jeff Bradtmueller made the second ACAC Tourney team, and senior Bryan Enterline received honorable mention.

(below) Exemplifying the worry of a close Sectional game, junior forward Carol Blouvelt and Coach Pam Moore think over their second half strategy.

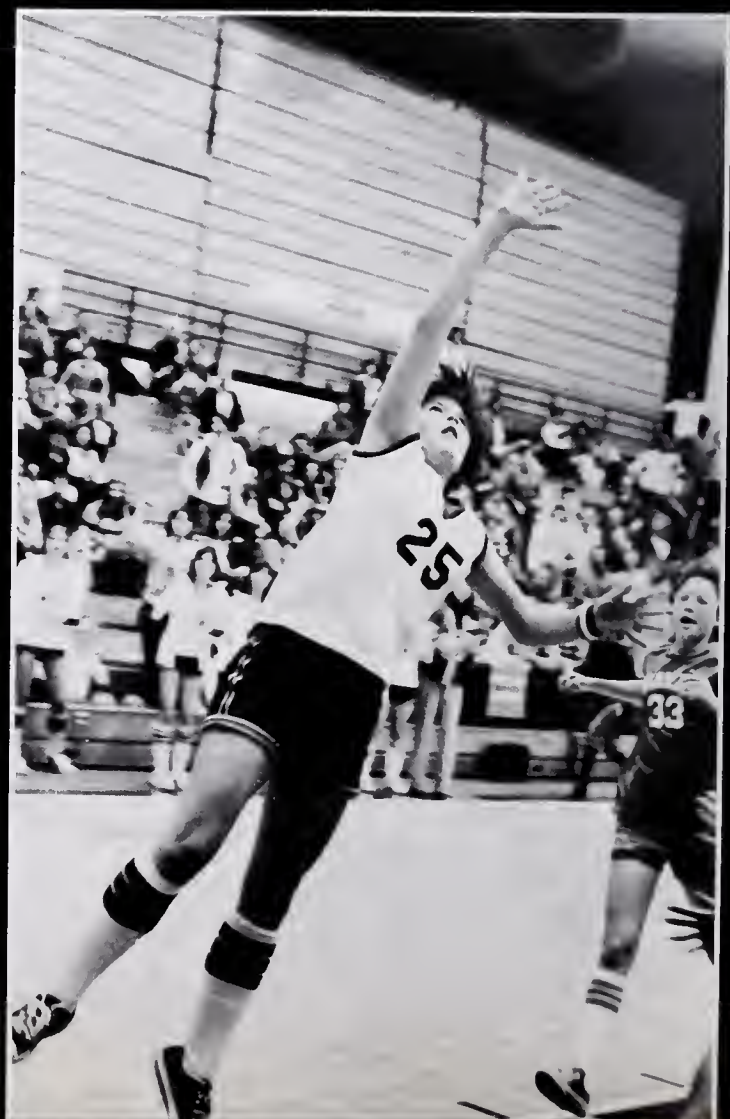

Coach Pam Moore's basketball team ended their season with a winning record of 11-5 and came one game away from being in the Semi-State playoffs. Final score in this game against Leo was 45-69.

Explaining the disappointment of the loss were Coach Moore's comments: "We made it further than we ever have, but the ball they threw would not miss and ours could not hit. We thought we would win because we had beaten them in regular season."

Coach Moore indicated that because of stamina and willingness, the girls pulled-off a victory against Wayne in, what she called, "the toughest and most exciting game of the season." This was the final game of the Sectional; and after two overtimes, the girls came through with a 63-60 win.

"The year showed successful play because of extreme pressure to do better than previous teams," said Coach Moore.

After outrunning her opponents, junior guard Jodi Smith scores a crucial lay-up during the overtime period in the Sectional game with Wayne.

In the Sectional game against Wayne, senior guard Kim Springer maneuvers around opponents to complete a pass to a teammate in the three-second lane.

Late in October, 15 members of Future Teachers of America (FTA) sold 131 miniature exotic trees, earning a profit of $130. Five varieties of plants were offered, including lemon, lime, and orange.

The group also hosted the reception for the members of the new Heritage Scholastic Society, Thursday, March 31.

Once again, the members sponsored the Elf Party, December 16. After choosing the two teachers of their choice, elves sent out nine clues. A positive elf identification meant a gift. Punch and cookies were served to 45 guests in attendance.

To end the year, they gathered at Nable Raman's for their annual banquet.

Emphasizing to incoming freshman and Values students how important the Latin language is in future occupations, Latin Club presented a 15-minute slide presentation, consisting of 40 color slides.

For the audio portion of the presentation, ten club members interviewed former Latin participants who now hold jobs. By doing this, they were able to show the students how beneficial Latin can be.

In celebration of the birthday of Rome, the club held their banquet at Three Kings Tavern, Thursday, April 21.

(above) In the 52-48 win over Belmont, junior Bob Enterline comes down the floor to aid sophomore forward Kevin Rennels in his fight for the ball.

Winning records were posted by both the freshmen and reserve basketball teams as they finished second and third, respectively, in mid-season tournaments.

After getting off to a slow start, the reserve squad finished with a 13-7 record. Their strength lay in good outside shooting and aggressiveness on the boards, while turnovers were cited by Coach Kevin Sipe as the squad's biggest weakness.

Coach Sipe summed up by saying, "This club is an exciting team to watch. It was evident by the number of people who came early to see the reserves play."

A strong press, good defense, and bench strength were the freshmen's strong points as they ended their season with a mark of six wins against four losses.

In the Freshmen Tourney, the team defeated Woodlan by five; and then had to wait for bad weather conditions to clear up before they met Carroll in the final game, which they eventually lost 52-37.

Stating his feelings about the overall season effort, Coach Gene Hany said, "The team tried hard, but just couldn't hit game nights. They were a little nervous and not used to playing together. As a group they have a good future."

Participating for the first time in a paper drive, the Office Education Association (OEA) collected five tons of newspaper, October 9. Fifteen members earned $110 to be used for club projects.

Other fund-raising events involved the selling of chocolate candy and over $2000 worth of advertising for the LANTERN.

One major service project was the making of coloring books for children in area hospitals during the Christmas season.

Participating in three contests, OEA placed at Regionals held at Harding High School, February 12, and went on to State held in Indianapolis, April 1-3. The Parliamentary Procedures Team placed first; junior Barb Fuelling, third in Shorthand 1; and senior Lisa Grotian, fourth in Clerical 1.

Proceeding on, these three entries traveled to Houston, Texas, to take part in the National Contest, May 6-11.

A breakfast was held for all next year's Intensive Lab students and employers for whom present members had worked.

Just after unwrapping her gift at the French Club Christmas party, junior Caleen Vardaman reacts to another member with a thanking smile.

Both French and Spanish Clubs concentrated on social activities as members became connoisseurs of foods and customs.

To celebrate Christmas, French Club members held a pot-luck dinner and gift exchange at advisor Mrs. Carol Scherer's home, December 12. One of the evening's festivities included the eating of Cherries Jubilee, complete with the ceremonial lighting of the brandy fire in the dark.

Spanish Club celebrated the Christmas season with a party hosted by junior Mindy Burroff. While there, they feasted on Spanish cuisine and enjoyed Spanish music.

The club completed the year with the annual Spanish Fiesta, held May 21 in the cafetorium. While dining on authentic Spanish food prepared by club members, the group was entertained by Umberto, a Spanish singer from Cuba, and watched slides of Spain. Highlighting the evening was the traditional breaking of a candy-filled pinata.

Fixing food in the school kitchen for the Spanish Club Fiesta, junior Sandy Lasch stirs hamburger to be used as the filling for tacos.

Giving them their ninth consecutive victorious season, the boys' gymnastics team finished with an 8-1 winning record.

Because of many snow days, three meets were not held due to cancellations. Coach Dale Guingrich commented, "This hindered the team greatly. It did not allow the boys the practice needed from those three meets. It kept the team from second at State."

At the State meet, senior Jim Wyss received a second in long horse vaulting.

"Winning their first Concord Invitational inspired the team to a Sectional victory," expressed Coach Guingrich, "The team showed more class and reached their point of confidence enabling them to win."

Firsts at Sectional included seniors David Albersmeyer, still rings; Kevin Scheumann, floor exercise and all-around; Jim Wyss, vaulting; and Brian Ruhl, trampoline. "This year the squad scored more firsts than any other team," said Coach Guingrich.

Expressing his overall views, Coach Guingrich replied, "This team had a lot of confidence and complete dedication."

As he supports himself in an L-seat, sophomore Jay Castleman warms up before a meet, hoping the extra practice will pay off with higher scores.

With the girls' gymnastics team under the guidance and assistance of a new coach, Miss Julie Haynes, the girls wrapped up the season with a 4-7 record. They also placed second at Sectional, and third in the Allen County Athletic Conference Meet.

Special honors went to freshman Penny Biddle. She was the first female gymnast to earn her way to the State Championships. Her accomplishment was exhibited through routines on the vaulting horse.

"The most exciting meet of the year," continued Coach Haynes, "was the New Haven

one. We left the gym perfectly satisfied knowing that we had beaten New Haven, until I received a telephone call later that evening and was notified that we had lost because of miscalculations in scoring."

Top exhibitors in events were freshman Kelley Minnick and Penny Biddle, junior Julie Kettelkamp, and senior Jody Krauter.

Because competition was divided into three different divisions, more girls were allowed to participate in meets. Records for these divisions were beginning, 5-9; intermediate, 2-9; and optional, 5-9.

After collecting money for the WOWO Penny Pitch at the Bishop Luers basketball game, senior Kerry Hoffman and junior Mike Dowler count donations.

In order to aid in school spirit, six Lettermen's Club members helped the varsity cheerleaders with their pre-game introduction of basketball players.

Lined up on either side of the varsity locker room doors, club members lifted the cheerleaders onto their shoulders as the band introduced the players with the song, "Our Boys Will Shine Tonight."

Having what Mr. Gene Hany, club sponsor, called a "quiet year," the members once again collected wood for the Homecoming bonfire and worked the coat check at home basketball contests. They also conducted a Penny Pitch contribution drive at the Bishop Luers game, December 17.

Due to the large amount of snow, the club's initiation ceremonies, scheduled December 13, were not held.

At the Winter Sports Awards ceremonies, March 24, Mrs. Dorathea Holle, retiring school secretary, was named as the third honorary Letterman. For this honor, Mrs. Holle received a wooden plaque with a large letter "H" mounted on it.

At the Buskins Bonquet held ot the Heritage House, junior Brion Carnes reads his newly received award far earning the NFL Degree of Distinction.

Because Buskins dropped the merit/demerit system for a point system, the entire student body was able to participate in the club's activities. After earning the required three points, seven students qualified for membership in May.

Three major activities highlighted the year. The Eighth Annual Heritage Speech Tournament, held December 18, and the all-school production of 110 IN THE SHADE, presented

April 1 and 2, gave students a chance to earn points for membership.

At the banquet, May 22, at the Heritage House, Mrs. Dorathea Holle was presented with a pewter goblet and made an honorary Buskin. With the trophy system changed, seven seniors received four of the six trophy levels. Recipient of the top honor, the Award of Distinction in Speech and Drama, was senior Karen Sorgen.

Working on the Ticket Committee for 110 IN THE SHADE, seniors John Deohl and Rene Riecke make sure the day's receipts are correctly recorded.

Moving on to post-season competition in Regionals were seven track members, four boys and three girls: sophomore Jim Cox, 100-yard dash; senior Bryan Enterline, high and long jump; sophomore Dave Painter, mile run; senior Tom Frank 880-yard run; sophomore Sheri Proegler, mile run; junior Carol Blauvelt, shot put and softball throw; and junior Donna Hormann, softball throw. Blauvelt also proceeded on to the State meet in her two field events.

As their 13-4 record shows, the male Patriot team proved to be stiff competitors throughout the season.

Three school records fell to the talents of senior Bryan Enterline as he cleared 6 feet, 8½ inches in the high jump; senior Tom Frank, the 880, in 1:58.3; and sophomore Dave Painter, the mile, in 4:22.9.

While winning three, three-way contests, the team's relay action took first at Heritage, fifth at Carroll, and second at South Adams. They placed third in the Allen County Athletic Conference (ACAC) Meet.

At the Spring Sports Awards ceremonies,

May 24, special recognition was given to senior Denny Schroeder for his outstanding track running and Enterline for his contribution in field events.

Highlighting the season for the girls was a winning record of 5-3 and the meet against Leo. Coach Julie Haynes commented, "Leo was the toughest and most exciting team we went against. They were ranked second in the county, and we had no idea that we would beat them the way we did."

The girls placed third in the ACAC Meet and seventh in the Sectional.

Outstanding individuals in their respective events were sophomore Sara Gilbert, 880; Proegler, mile run; Blauvelt, softball throw and shot put; Hormann, softball throw; junior Jill Scheumann, high jump; and sophomore Cheryl Darras, 440-yard run.

Coach Haynes summed up the season by saying, "The girls proved themselves successful. They were cohesive and worked well together. Also, I feel they were a strong team considering there were no seniors and they were a young team."

(below) To clear the cross bar in his best event, the high jump, senior Bryon Enterline concentrates on his leap just before he kicks his feet over.

Before joining other members of the Heritage Scholastic Honor Society in the library, senior Kevin Scheumann places his name tag on his shirt.

To honor outstanding academic students, the new Heritage Scholastic Honor Society was formed as a replacement for the disbanded National Honor Society.

Instead of inducting members during a convocation, a different method was used. Valedictorian Michelle Sorg and Salutatorian Denny Schroeder presented new members with invitations, inviting them to a reception, March 31, in their honor.

The banquet was held at Zoli's Chalet, April 22. Schroeder was master of ceremonies and speaker was Reverend Dr. Joanne Cook. Gold cords to be worn at graduation were awarded after dinner.

On Honors Day, Future Farmers of America honors went to senior Jeff Keiss, Chapter Star Farmer; Larry Reidenbach, DeKalb Award; and Dan Bacon, Agribusinessman Award.

At County judging sites, two in the fall and three in the spring, poultry, crops, livestock, and soils teams received firsts and the dairy team second.

As a service project, members helped acquaint children with farm animals when they worked at the Fort Wayne Community School Kindergarten Project, sponsored by the Wayne Rothgeb television show.

Baseballers' post-season accomplishments ranked high as they repeated as Allen County Athletic Conference (ACAC) champions and captured their first Sectional.

In a rescheduled game June 3, the Pats nabbed the ACAC crown by defeating Norwell 8-0. Included in the win was a no-hitter thrown by senior Shawn Benzinger.

The team whipped South Adams 12-0 in the final game at Bellmont to win their first Sectional. En route to their championship, two records fell as the team held their opponents scoreless in the competition; and senior Benny Reinking struck out 17 Starfire batters in the final game.

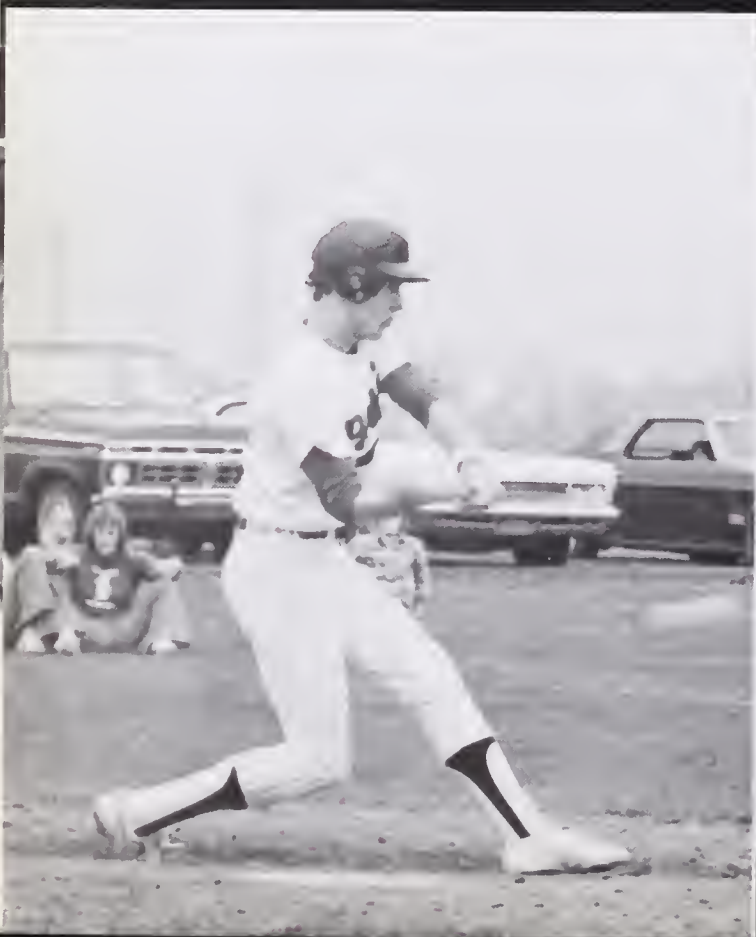

Named to the All-Conference team were three seniors, infielder Gary Kukelhan, catcher Rex Counterman, outfielder Bill Henry, and junior infielder Dennis Liggett. Selected to the second team were two senior pitchers, Benzinger and Reinking.

The golfers underwent leadership changes when Mr. John Campbell and Mr. Richard Bourquin took charge of the team.

The 12-member team ended the season with a 9-8 record as they placed sixth in the ACAC and tenth in the Sectional. At the Spring Sports Awards ceremony, May 24, senior Brian Ruhl received the Outstanding Player Award for his accomplishments.

Beginning the year with five active members, the National Forensic League (NFL) gained three, earning a total of 11 new degrees during the tourney season.

The team competed in nine tournaments and qualified members for 16 final rounds of competition, capturing 13 ribbons and one individual first-place trophy.

Junior Brian Carnes became the third underclassman to earn the Degree of Distinction after he had amassed the highest point total for any junior in history—285.

Carnes qualified for eight final rounds in the divisions of Humorous Interpretation and Dramatic. He advanced to the State Finals in Humorous and placed fifth in Dramatic at the NFL Solo District Tourney.

Other ribbon winners were freshman Kathy Garman; junior Denise Minich; and seniors Karen Sorgen, Lisa Presler, and Cyndi Newhouse. Newhouse placed eighth at the Sectional Tourney, qualifying a second consecutive time for Regionals.

For her four-year record, Newhouse won the Outstanding Speaker Award at the annual Speech and Drama Banquet, May 24.

While waiting for round scores to be posted at the Sectional Speech Tourney held at Elmhurst, senior Lisa Presler converses with teammates.

After being awarded the first place trophy in Humorous Interp at the Heritage Speech Tourney, junior Brian Carnes is congratulated by Mr. Will Travis.

Junior high construction made us stop and consider all the changes taking place around us—we were engulfed in turning points.

Nationally, we could not help but become involved in the Presidential election, as the country moved into its third century.

We faced the worst winter weather in recorded history, reminding us once again a change was coming in our way of life—we could no longer ignore natural shortages.

At the end of the year, two of the persons with us since the school's inception, school secretary, Mrs. Dorathea Holle, and math teacher, Mr. Bill Williams retired. In the future, we would be reminded of this turning point when walking by the trophy case in the main lobby, now inscribed with Mr. Williams' name because of his many hours of dedicated coaching, and when we passed by the main office, missing Mrs. Holle's friendly smile.

Baxes, emptied of new furniture, crowd the library entrance, reminding students of a major turning point of the year—the junior high addition.

Construction helps us see turning points

At a Bicentennial Class reunion party, seniors Julie Pequignat, Jeanette Knueve, and Kelley Metheny admire the stone marker to designate the spot of the class' time capsule to be opened in 50 years.

(right) When FHA members carol at the Lutheran Home, Mrs. Geraldine Wiegman, club spansar, shares a tender mament with an elderly resident.

(left) Sitting in a vacant, darkened hallway by a lonely student's waste barrel, full of discarded love letters, seems to capture the essence of a yearly turning point: the end of school.

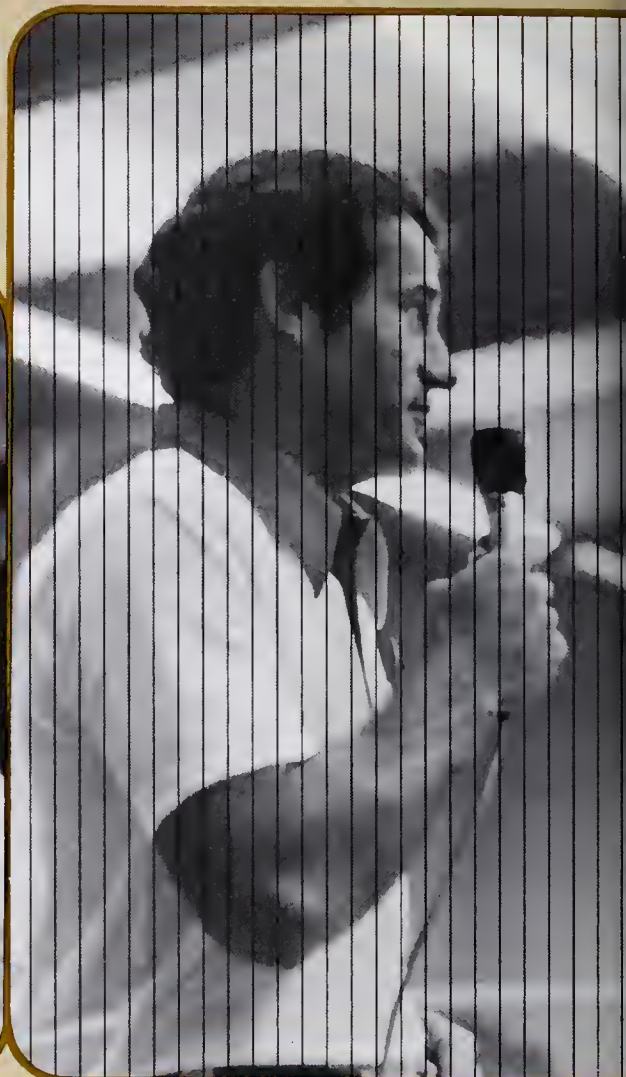

(below) At an after-school set construction work session for 110 IN THE SHADE, freshman Julie Beal stops to admire her work as she turns a plain stage flat into an old-fashioned general store front.

Major turns appear as year progresses

(above) Making a compound cut on the milling machine in Metals 5-6, senior Stan Spieth watches as he turns a piece of metal into functional equipment.

(below) Apparently not in the Christmas spirit, vandals broke into the school, December 24, turning areas of the building, including Assistant Principal Judith Nojib's office, into a state of havoc.

Wearing formal dresses to emphasize spirit at Dress-Up Day of Homecoming week, juniors Kay Bienz and Liz Ambler complete Academic Grammar worksheets.

Turning points surfaced when National Honor Society was dropped and replaced by Heritage Scholastic Honor Society, when Buskins opened their spring musical tryouts to the entire student body, when powder puff football and spirit sticks debuted Homecoming week, when intramurals were initiated during homerooms, when seniors threw their caps at graduation, and when juniors sold the highest total ever in magazine sales, reaching nearly $10,000.

A new offset press aided in business classes, but future vocational training would be affected by the phasing out of affiliation with the Regional Vocational School.

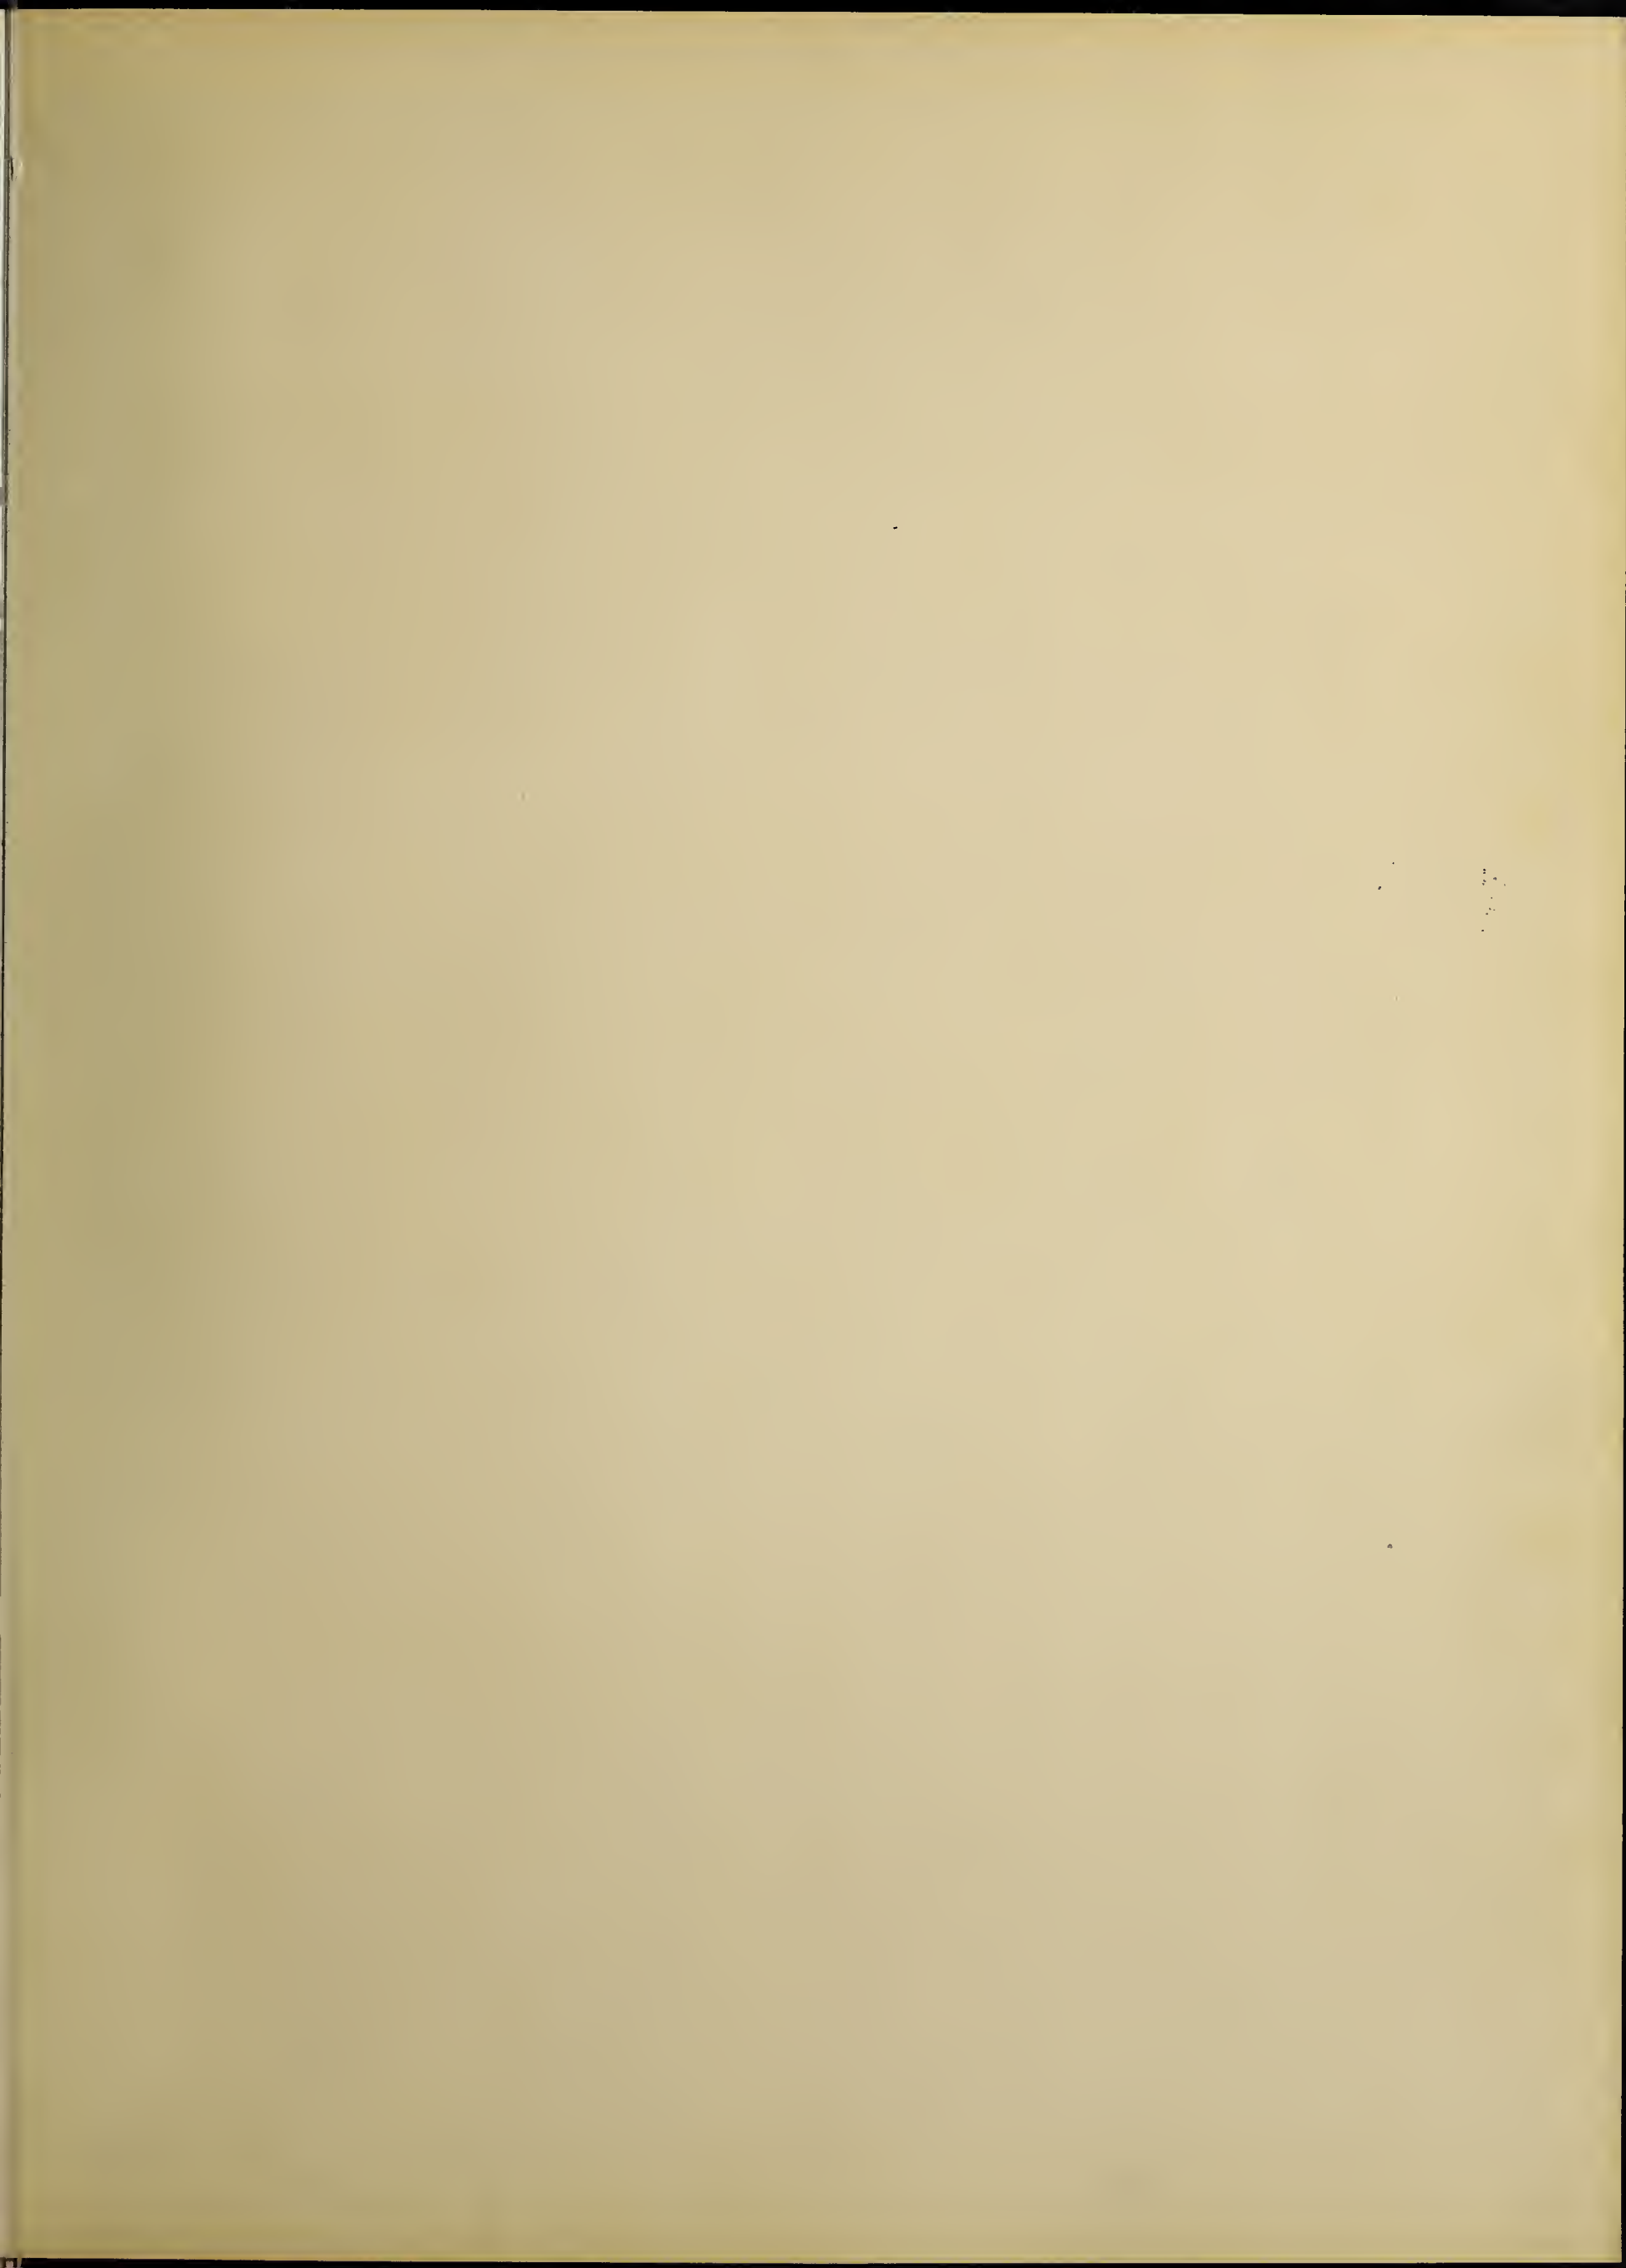

Turning points were also seen in sports. The girls' volleyball team had to play an opposing team with a male player, the baseball squad captured a first Sectional title, senior Benny Reinking became the first basketball player to reach 1,000 career points, sophomore Dave Painter smashed all records by winning first at every cross country meet, and the girls' basketball team came one step closer to a Regional title.

Implanted in our memories, the events we lived through and the people we associated with have left their everlasting impression on us.

They were a part of a year marked by change, a year uniquely filled with major turning points.

Lying by the roadside, the school sign, discarded during the bulldozing for the junior high driveway, makes us well aware of the change taking place.
